Probe Urged Into City Gas Prices

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The provincial government should launch an investigation into why motorists in Victoria pay at least 5 cents more than those in Vancouver for a gallon of gasoline, Ald. Sam Bawlf said today.

"Victorians always seem to be subsidizing somebody else; we are always getting the short end of the stick."

He was commenting on a Times story Wednesday that showed gasoline prices as high as 67.9 in Victoria while the top price in Vancouver was 62.9 for the same product.

A Vancouver oil executive said transportation costs to the Island should add only 1 cent per gallon.

Ald. Bawlf, chairman of the transportation committee, said it was up to the provincial government to take some action because there was nothing city council could do.

"This is not a case of passing the buck. We do not have any authority over gasoline prices at the municipal level."

He said Victorians are "getting it in both ears" on the gasoline issue because the provincial government is using its 15 cent a gallon gas tax to subsidize car insurance rates in other areas. Victoria has the lowest car insurance rates in B.C. because of a low accident record but will lose this distinction through a new ICBC policy of charging a flat rate in all areas.

Meanwhile, the Victoria Chamber of Commerce said it plans an investigation into the gasoline price spread.

Chamber president Robert McHaffie said that if transportation costs amount to only 1 cent per gallon there is no justification for the present

Naming The Names

SEATTLE (AP) — A spokesman for two environmental and recreation groups has proposed naming oil spills after politicians.

Douglas Scott, a spokesman for the Sierra Club and the Federation of Western Outdoor Clubs, issued a statement Wednesday after testimony at a coast guard hearing indicated that a tanker carrying nearly 10 million gallons of crude oil narrowly missed running aground near Anacortes last year. (See also Page 14.)

"Our modest proposal," Scott said, "is that each spill, like a hurricane, have a name — the name of a state legislator who votes in favor of bringing big oil tankers into Puget Sound."

B.C. May Move Welfare Jobless

A plan to relocate welfare recipients to areas of B.C. where jobs are available is being considered by the provincial government, Human Resources Minister Norman Levi said Wednesday.

The policy will be clarified in the fall, said Levi, who was speaking on a taped television show to be broadcast Sunday night on Channel 6.

Today the proposal was given tentative support from two other cabinet ministers and was welcomed by Victoria-area municipal spokesmen and some members of the community.

Levi said his department had been examining the problem of unemployment and welfare for two months and will discuss methods of dealing with it in a meeting with Canada Manpower.

The minister was reacting to the recent action of Surrey and Coquitlam in removing about 90 single, able-bodied persons from the welfare roll, and said his philosophy was that able-bodied persons must work.

In outlining how the proposal might work, Levi said: "I think that we're going to have proscribe certain areas in terms of low employability and say to people: 'If you stay in this area you have a limited amount of possibility to get welfare and then you must move on to an area where there is employment.'"

He added: "This business of moving people from where they prefer to live . . . to areas where there's a shortage of employment — that's one of the things we're going to have to tackle."

A pilot program of setting up such a program in B.C., is being undertaken by a large company, he said. Only families have been considered so far and they would be moved to an area where jobs and housing are waiting for them. He would not elaborate.

The biggest employment problem today is that of single persons in the 16-24 age group, who have few job skills and who might be helped by training and retraining programs, the minister indicated.

But Levi noted the Surrey and Coquitlam action had not worked. He said those areas still lack pickers needed by berry farmers, although that was one employment opportunity cited by the municipalities in support of reducing the welfare roll.

Levi believes Surrey and Coquitlam acted illegally in violation of the federal-provincial agreement on the Canada Assistance Plan. This provides for 50 per cent of welfare costs paid by Ottawa, 40 per cent by the province and 10 per cent by municipalities, and unilateral action by a municipality is not permitted.

B.C. will take no action until the end of summer when the effect of the cutback will be assessed.

But if the municipal action has not been effective, Ottawa can sever its payments and the province can stop pay-

Ottawa Bomb Scare Real

Times News Services

OTTAWA — A bomb device "big enough to do a lot of damage" was safely removed from a city shopping mall here last Wednesday but a search for another bomb three hours later produced nothing.

The device, found inside a shoe box in a tree planter was used to decorate Bank Street mall. It was situated about 10 to 15 feet from RCMP A-Division headquarters and was discovered by an officer reporting for night duty.

Police said an officer protected by a shield opened the shoe box to find a tangle of wires and two squat cylindrical devices which contained black powder.

The threat which fizzled came at 2:35 a.m. and sent police on a fruitless search. Police said they had no clues in either incident.

Convict Holds 12

HUNTSVILLE, Tex. (UPI) — A desperado wanted for 50 murders in the United States and Mexico held 12 hostages in the state prison today and vowed to kill them if his demands for freedom were not met.

Three other inmates were with him, two of them fellow Mexican-Americans apparently helping in the escape attempt.

Prison officials said they had no intention of meeting the demands, and Warden Hal Husbands early today broke off talks with the leader, Fred Gomez Carrasco, 34.

Carrasco, armed with three .38-calbre revolvers, ordered bedding, food, pillows, water, aspirin and a bottle of liquid antacid sent to his fortress in a classroom of the prison library.

The hostages, eight of them women, were four librarians, six instructors, a prison guard and a Catholic chaplain, the Rev. Joseph O'Brien. The status of the fourth prisoner was unclear, but appeared to be an inmate hostage.

JAWORSKI SEEKS TAPE DEADLINE

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Special prosecutor Leon Jaworski, moving swiftly after receiving a Supreme Court victory, asked a federal court today to compel President Nixon to begin delivering subpoenaed tape recordings within two days.

Jaworski asked the court to order that Nixon deliver 20 tapes within two days, 21 tapes within six days and the remainder within 10 days.

Nixon pledged Wednesday to comply fully with the court's decision ordering him to turn the tapes over to Judge John J. Sirica.

The president expressed disappointment in the ruling but said, "I respect and accept the court's decision."

Presidential counsel James St. Clair said that he would undertake the "time-consuming" job of readying the tapes but that it might be some weeks before he could hand them over to Judge Sirica.

Nixon Defenders Failing in Fight

WASHINGTON — The House of Representatives judiciary committee today heard a Republican plead for fairness to President Nixon and a Democrat urge his ouster for "open and notorious defiance of the law."

Opening the second round of the televised debate, Representatives Charles Wiggins (Rep. Calif.) said Nixon "is entitled to a presumption of innocence."

The second speaker, Representative John Conyers (Dem. Mich.) countered that Nixon must be removed from office "to restore to our government the proper balance of constitutional power and serve notice to all future presidents that such abuse of conduct . . . never again be tolerated."

Nixon's defenders on the committee chipped away today at what they termed "minimal and inadequate" impeachment evidence, but they apparently failed to budge Democrats and swing Republicans prepared to vote in favor of Nixon's removal from office.

One Republican, Hamilton Fish Jr., of New York, refused to commit himself on the impeachment vote but said he was "deeply troubled" over the evidence of presidential complicity."

Wiggins, Nixon's chief defender on the committee, argued that out of more than 40 books of evidence studied in the impeachment inquiry, "you could put all the admissible evidence (against Nixon) in half of one book."

Conyers, one of the outspoken Nixon critics on the committee, said the president was responsible for "wholesale violation of the constitutional rights of citizens."

He also criticized Nixon's refusal to comply with the committee's subpoenas, saying:

"Unto this day the president is in open and notorious defiance of the law because he has failed to comply with the directives of this committee to produce the documents that we needed . . ."

If the committee approves impeachment in a vote expected this weekend, then the full House must decide whether to send the matter to the Senate for trial.

The committee opened its debate Wednesday night and heard Representative Charles Sandman (Rep. N.J.) say:

"There are sufficient votes here for an impeachment resolution."

"Everyone knows that," he said. "There is no use kidding ourselves about it."

That schedule suffered a slight setback Wednesday night when a bomb scare forced a 47-minute delay.

The threat, telephoned to the Capitol switchboard, forced Rodino to empty the packed room while police searched fruitlessly.

Later, after Rodino had recessed the proceedings for the night and the hearing room had almost emptied, a second bomb threat was received. Again nothing was found.

Cod Ruling for U.K.

THE HAGUE (AP) — The International Court of Justice decided by a 10-4 vote today that Iceland cannot unilaterally exclude British fishing vessels from the area between 12 and 60 nautical miles off its coast.

OOPS! THERE WENT 3,700 YEARS . . .

OTTAWA (CP) — It's enough to give an electronic calculator indigestion, but Canada lost more than 37 centuries worth of work in just one month this year because of work stoppages.

That's not quite how the labor department reported statistics for May Wednesday, but it's how the figures work out arithmetically.

The total May loss in man-days — the amount of work one man does in one — was 1,365,870, compared with 619,740 in April and 523,920 in May, 1973.

Divide 1,365,870 by 365, the number of days in a non-leap year, and the answer is 3,742.1 man-years. Divide that by 100, and the answer is 37.42 man-centuries.

Pint and a Chat At Prairie Inn

Central Saanich's historic Prairie Inn may ring again with the clink of beer glasses and the zing of darts.

The Inn will probably house the first neighborhood pub approved for the Greater Victoria area under new provincial legislation.

Central Saanich council subdivision and zoning committee will recommend to council next week that the application by the Inn's owners, Gavin and Bev Harper, be approved.

The Harpers have already started the mandatory canvass of neighbors within a six-block radius of the proposed pub site and so far the reaction has been good.

"A fellow called me this morning to ask why I hadn't gone back to his place because there were three people there who wanted to sign in favor of the pub," Bev Harper said today.

The pub could open up within two months, she said, and will have one room with a bar, tables and standing room, another room with a fireplace and tables which will be the "quiet place" and facilities for musical entertainment and dancing.

Cribbage boards will also be provided for customers, she said.

The Inn was built in 1893, the year the Victoria and Sidney Railway went through the area, and was the first pub on the Saanich Peninsula.

Cyprus Force Hiked

Times News Services

OTTAWA—External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said today Canada will double its troop strength in Cyprus, as requested by United Nations Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim.

Sharp told reporters that Canada will increase the number of Canadian soldiers from 487 men to 950.

But he said he considered the increase in troops "a temporary measure" and said it would be reviewed when Canada reviews its participation in the Cyprus force on Dec. 15.

He said the Canadian soldiers could be on Cyprus within four days.

Meanwhile, a threatened clash between Turkish and United Nations troops over control of Nicosia airport was averted today with a pledge from Turkey not to use force to try to eject the UN soldiers.

A contingent of 500 British troops in armored cars was reported on its way to the airport from British bases in south Cyprus to bolster the UN force. Britain was flying a squadron of 12 Phantom jets to the Island because of what the British defence ministry called the "tense situation."

Canadian troops on Cyprus have been moved back from the airport at Nicosia to their old job of patrolling the Green Line between Greek and Turkish-Cypriot positions.

The 100 Canadians have been replaced by British troops.

Fighting on the troubled island died out today, but Turkish troops still surrounded a tiny UN contingent holding the battered remains of Nicosia airport.

One UN officer said Greek anti-aircraft emplacements were on the perimeter of the airport and Turkish troops surrounded it.

Canadian troops played a major role in the takeover of the airport, which was a mess after the ceasefire quieted most of the fighting between Greeks and Turks.

Turkish Foreign Minister Turan Gunes, however, arrived in Geneva today for Cyprus peace talks with his British and Greek counterparts and said prospects for a settlement are good.

"The conference is starting with a good omen," Gunes said in French when he landed at Geneva Airport. "We have conference partners in the Greek government of Constantine Caramanlis who are well known in Turkey."

It is expected that the ministers will meet for about three days, adopt a communique supporting the ceasefire and create a working group.

Obscene Mule-Riders Beware at Thetis

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

If, in a mood of gay abandon, you feel the urge to gallop your "horse, mule or ass" on the beach at Thetis Lake Park, the while emitting "offensive noises" or hurling "obscene or insulting" remarks at sunbathers, before cooling off with a quick skinny dip in the lake . . . resist the impulse.

The general prohibition on such whimsical frolics already stands on the city's statute book, in the form of the parks bylaw, but a bylaw scheduled for introduction at today's city council meeting seeks to make the no-no's more specific in their application to Thetis Lake.

City solicitor Jakob de Villiers says as the city can normally legislate only within its geographical boundaries, it had to obtain a special act of the legislature in 1962 to legislate for Thetis Lake Park, and at that time the city's parks bylaw was amended to incorporate such provisions.

But now it is felt that the special topographical and other features of the semi-wilderness park should be recognized with a separate set of rules and regulations from those governing its formal city cousins.

For instance, the draft bylaw for Thetis Lake includes sections dealing with the ticket machine at the park entrance, and the mandatory displaying of 25-cent parking tickets on vehicle dashboards.

There are, too, other interesting differences between the proposed new bylaw and the old catch-all statute.

The Thetis Lake bylaw would ban any dogs in the park unless they are "kept on a leash or carried within the arms" of their owners at all times. (Leash-less owners of St. Bernards and Great Danes be warned — that could be a tiring walk!)

But the general parks bylaw is more sweeping in its proscription of all two-and four-legged creatures: "No person as owner or having the control of any animal or fowl shall suffer or permit such animal or fowl to run at large . . ."

Fowl aren't mentioned in the Thetis Lake rules, so presumably one could saunter along the trails with one's tame duck waddling behind.

Then there's the whole question of public behavior and decency.

Under this general heading the Thetis Lake bylaw would insist, among other provisions, that no one "undress

India Joining Race

NEW DELHI (UPI) — India will join the space race within the next four years, Prime Minister Indira Gandhi said Wednesday. "The first orbital flight is scheduled to take place in 1978," Mrs. Gandhi said in a written reply to a question from parliament. She gave no further details.

Abortion MD Gets 18 Months

MONTREAL (CP) — Dr. Henry Morgentaler, 50, who said he has performed 5,000 to 6,000 abortions to demonstrate his opposition to Canadian abortion laws, was sentenced today to 18 months in "common jail" by Mr. Justice James K. Hugessen of the Court of Queen's Bench.

Morgentaler was convicted by the Quebec Court of Appeal in April of performing an illegal abortion on a 26-year-old student August 15, 1973. He remained free on bail, however, pending outcome of an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada against the appellate court decision, scheduled for Oct. 4.

The Court of Appeal decision overturned the original court decision of last November when a Court of Queen's Bench jury acquitted the Montreal doctor.

In overturning the original decision, the appellate court justices ruled that the necessity of the operation had never adequately been proved.

In addition to today's 18-month sentence, Mr. Justice Hugessen imposed a three-year probation period in which the doctor is forbidden to perform abortions except in an accepted or approved hospital.

ONE LEG of his old trousers is being enough to hold James Hamman, 24, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, now 196 pounds and formerly 396. His streamlined shape comes not from willpower but from a gastric bypass operation in March, 1973.

CANNON PRIVATE EYEING VICTORIA

Frank Cannon is eyeing Victoria.

The portly private eye of television fame portrayed by actor Bill Conrad is planning to shoot two shows here next spring.

He wanted to come in September but the visit has been postponed, a Quinn Martin Production spokesman said Wednesday.

"Bill visited Victoria and he likes it, so he suggested the crew visit there to make a couple of shows," production manager Fred Ahern said. "But trying to adapt two scripts to your area right away is too much of a task, so we'll have to leave it till later."

The cigar-chomping Conrad, who's an avid sailor and gourmet chef, got his start in the television acting because of his voice. He formerly narrated Quinn Martin's production The Fugitive.

Ahern said the proposed visit is part of an attempt to get a "different look with different scenery" for the series in which Cannon inevitably takes on the bad guys in a law-abiding world.

His accompanying television crew numbers about 65 to 70 people and "we use a certain percentage of Canadian talent on location."

Emergency Shelter Home Open

Victoria Rental Aid Service has opened its third emergency shelter home and full occupancy is expected by Friday, service director Jim Nelson said today.

He said the first family to be admitted to the Hillside annex shelter, a mother and two children, is typical of those helped by the service.

Nelson has 10 families on his emergency home waiting list and all applicants have more than two children, he said.

Other shelters, one at 702 Esquimalt for single persons and couples without children, and one at 646 Hillside which houses one family and the services' offices, are full, he said.

The newest shelter, should help alleviate housing difficulties for five families.

Nelson said Victoria's housing situation is getting worse. his office receives about 40 calls a day from people who can't find a place to live. Most are single-parent or low income families who have just moved to Victoria and can't afford rising rents.

Most rental aid clients, he said, can afford rents of $100 to $175 a month, but accommodation for a family of four rents for $200 to $275 a month, he said.

Rental Aid is seeking donations of blankets, sheets, a refrigerator and stove and other household items for the newest emergency house.

IWA Scans New Offer

KELOWNA (CP) — Striking woodworkers reached a tentative agreement with one company while union negotiators today were considering a fresh offer that could end a strike by 10,000 International Woodworkers of America in British Columbia's southern interior.

About 40 companies bargaining through the Interior Forest Labor Relations Association made a new offer to the IWA late Wednesday.

Wyman Trineer, chief IWA negotiator said he is optimistic a settlement is near and that workers could return to work by the end of the week.

The 10,000 members walked out at noon Wednesday to back demands.

Canadian Cellulose Co. Ltd. said a tentative agreement was reached late Wednesday between its southern interior companies and the IWA, which represents about 400 workers.

Details of the agreement will not be released until after a ratification vote. Union spokesmen said workers will remain off the job until vote results are known.

Details of the new IFLRA offer were not released, but a previous offer included a 12 per-cent increase with a minimum raise of 65 cents an hour in a one-year contract. Base rate for interior woodworkers is $4.45 an hour.

himself in public" or "be naked in public."

Fair enough, but the dress (or undress) requirements seem to stop far short of those earnest strictures in the parks bylaw, denouncing the wearing of "any bathing suit to any extent transparent, or any bathing suit not entirely modest in make and style on any bathing beach or in any park."

Asked about the apparent liberalization of bureaucratic thinking in the age of the bikini, de Villiers laughed and said: "In the light of changing social morals it seems appropriate to leave it to the courts to decide what is naked and what is not."

Although the Thetis Lake bylaw was on the list of six new bylaws scheduled for introduction at today's council meeting, officials indicated it might be deferred pending the resolution of city efforts to have the park recognized as a regional responsibility.

A companion bylaw also slated for first readings would formally bestow "reserve" status on the 1,118-acre park — a device which ensures the land may not be sold and is reserved for "park purposes for the pleasure, recreation and enjoyment of the public."

Passage of the bylaw requires only a simple majority of council, but to remove the reservation requires not only a two-thirds majority vote of all council members but also approval of the provincial cabinet.

The cabinet may also order the matter to be put to a referendum.

Oats

Prices of gasoline have begun to fall in Vancouver as a result of a price war just beginning there. Self-serve stations on the mainland are selling gasoline for as low as 45.9, a full 12 cents below the lowest discount price in Victoria.

One Victoria company is selling Shell gasoline at 54.9 cents but it is on a once-a-week basis and involves a minimum $1.50 charge for a car wash.

Robert Macmillan, manager of The Car Wash, said he plans to lower the price to 53.9 in the near future to build up business.

He said Victorians have suddenly become very cost conscious and they shop around for a low gasoline price.

Wayne Wrigley, manager of Douglas Street Mohawk Service, said he had to lower his gas prices to keep customers.

His present price is 58.9, down from 63.9 a week ago.

"When it was 63.9 I had a lot of people driving in and driving out again as soon as they saw the price. Mostly tourists. But a lot of Victorians are getting price conscious, too," Wrigley said.

"This is something quite new for Victoria."

He said volume is growing among self-service stations in Victoria and he had to bring his price down to compete with them. He was determined to hold a 58.9 if he could.

Robert Dunsmuir, Victoria chairman of the Automotive Retailers Association, said his 160 service station members are becoming concerned about price cutting by self-serve and discount firms.

"I am urging them all to hang tough and not panic. If they panic and start cutting their prices it could lead to a very dangerous situation."

Dunsmuir said his own station, Blanshard Super Service, had been selling 50,000 gallons of gasoline per month before the discount and self-serves opened but now was down to 20,000 gallons per month.

"But we are making it up on other things like tires and batteries. The full-service gas stations can survive this way."

He said if his members started worrying about lower prices by competitors they would not be able to maintain their profit levels.

"The only ones to benefit from a price war would be the suppliers, the oil companies. They would increase their volume."

Welfare

ments to municipalities for welfare recipients.

Highways Minister Graham Lea, who recently expressed his views on "forced labor" for welfare recipients, elaborated on the statement.

He said he did not agree with the policy of requiring work for welfare payments. But he did favor working for wages.

"What you can do is provide work for people . . . it is up to people generally, government and industry, to provide an economic picture that gives jobs to everybody," Lea said.

Labor Minister Bill King disagreed with the interpretation of Levi's proposal as a "work for welfare" plan.

It was a plan that would give greater mobility to the work force, King said.

"Obviously if you get employment elsewhere in the province, that will reduce the welfare rolls in Vancouver, and that's common sense," said the labor minister.

Strong support for the no-work-no-welfare stand adopted by Surrey and Coquitlam municipalities was voiced by the acting mayor of Saanich, Ald. William Noel.

He said regardless of any provincial ideas on relocation, he would be prepared to urge that the Greater Victoria Intermunicipal Committee recommend such a policy to member municipalities.

"Mr. Vander Zalm (Surrey mayor Bill Vander Zalm) said when there's work you darn well work or you don't get anything, and I would support that 100 per cent," Noel said.

"When you see a healthy looking fellow and his girl picking up welfare cheques and living off the fruits of the land while the rest of us pick up the tab, I say the hell with that," he added.

Victoria's acting mayor Ald. Alf Hood said inevitably problems would arise in a relocation program, but the idea was worth considering in an effort to ensure that those welfare recipients capable of working do find work.

"All too often we find people who are capable of doing a job of work but who are too selective on where they will live; they're not prepared to go up-country," he said.

Said Victoria Ald. Tom Christie: "If a person is able to work he should go where the work is. Not everyone can live in the lower mainland or the banana belt if the work isn't here to be had."

Esquimalt Mayor Art Young also endorsed the suggested policy, saying a "prime requisite" of eligibility for social assistance should be the willingness to move to where jobs are available — provided the government foots the bill for moving expenses.

But the program would have to be administered with some discretion and compassion, he said, adding: "I don't think everyone has to go to Timbuktu."

Mob Denounces Language Bill

QUEBEC (CP) — Almost 2,000 demonstrators swarmed over the lawns of the legislature buildings Wednesday chanting and waving placards denouncing the Liberal government and its language legislation.

They listened to speeches from the province's labor leaders, including Marcel Pepin, president of the Confederation of National Trade Unions and Yvon Charbonneau, president of the Centrale des Enseignants du Quebec, as well as the six Parti Quebecois members of the national assembly who have conducted a filibuster of the bill saying it does not go far enough to establish French as the working language in the province.

After his address, Claude Charron, PQ education critic, was carried through the crowd on the shoulders of supporters.

He told the protesters their job in preventing the "treason from being perpetrated on the Quebec people by a government in the "pay of the Anglophones" was just beginning.

To wild cheering, he said the demonstration, which lasted 2½ hours, showed that the six PQ members represent the sentiments of the majority of Quebecers on Bill 22.

Notice of a motion to invoke closure to cut off committee debate of the bill is expected to appear on the legislature order paper today.

The move follows the failure of a meeting of all party leaders to produce agreement on a time limit for clause-by-clause study of the legislation.

Oil Profits Soar in U.S.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Profits of major domestic oil companies soared again in the second quarter and first half of this year, ranging from 28 to almost 700 per cent.

Not all of the major companies have reported their earnings, but the biggest gain so far was 680 per cent for the first half to 160.375 million or 2.74 a share for the first half on revenues of 2.94 billion by Dr. Armand Hammer's Occidental Petroleum Corp.

The figures compared with 31.86 million or 40 cents a share a year earlier on sales of 1.49 billion. In the second quarter, Occidental had earnings of 1.59 a share against 36 cents a year ago.

Indiana Standard had a 131 per cent profit rise for the second quarter and 106 per cent for the half. Indiana Standard's second quarter net income was 280 million or 3.99 a share against 121.3 million or 1.74 a share a year ago. For the half, profit was 499 million or 7.12 a share, up from 242 million or 3.48 a share a year ago. Revenues for the half spurted to 4.753 billion from 2.997 billion a year earlier.

Continental Oil Co. had a 111.3 per cent earnings gain first half to 209.6 million from 99.2 million last year. Per share rose to 4.15 from 1.97. Sales spurted to 3.4 billion from 1.96 billion. For the second quarter, Conoco earned 1.99 a share on sales of 1.8 billion, up from 1.03 a year earlier on sales of 1.03 billion.

Phillips Petroleum earnings for the first half more than doubled to 232 million or 3.06 a share from 89.9 million or 1.19 a share a year ago. Revenues jumped to 2.47 billion from 1.375 billion.

GUNMEN MOVE NEAR INDIANS

KENORA, Ont. (CP) — A communications link has been established between civic officials and a band of armed Indians who have barricaded themselves in a small park but tension flared briefly Wednesday night when several white men carrying rifles stationed themselves outside the park.

A police car arived at the scene shortly afterwards and took one of the men away. The others disappeared into the woods.

The incident drew a sharp response from Harvey Major, (left) an American Indian Movement adviser to the Ojibway Warriors Society and the man in charge of Indian security forces at the park.

"If any others come around here we will take them prisoners and they will be treated like prisoners. We're not at war with the public but we're not going to be soft with white vigilanties."

The incident resulted in stepped-up police patrols in the area on the town's outskirts. It was the first time since the occupation began that an outbreak of violence appeared to be an immediate threat.

Police had been taking a hands-off approach to the occupation in order not to spark a direct confrontation.

Meanwhile, Kenora-area chiefs held a meeting Wednesday with the leaders of the dissident group, the first such contact made. After two hours of talks, the chiefs left the park and moved into a meeting with civic officials. There was no word on what was discussed at the meetings which were to continue today.

Chile Pays Up For Mines

SANTIAGO (WP) — The Chilean military junta Wednesday agreed to pay $59.2 million in cash to the Anaconda Copper Company, U.S. owners of the minority share in two large copper mines nationalized three years ago under Salvador Allende.

The agreement covers Chuquicamata, the biggest, most-productive open pit copper mine in the world, and the smaller El Salvador mine.

It also removes the single largest cause of Chile's difficulties in the money markets of the United States and Western Europe and underlines the determination of the military government to hold on to the mines.

Last March, the government made an agreement to pay the Cerro Corp. $42 million over 15 years for the Andina mine. Wednesday's compensation left only two mines, of the five nationalized by Allende, still subject to negotiations.

They are El Teniente, a huge underground mine that was 49 per cent owned by the Kennecott Corporation until July 1971, and Exotica, a smaller open pit mine once 49 per cent owned by Anaconda.

The lack of compensation for the U.S. share in Chilean copper mines was one of the main elements behind the Nixon administration's decision to vote against loans from international credit institutions like the World Bank for countries that had nationalized U.S. holdings without adequate compensation.

It prompted the U.S. to argue successfully against renegotiating Chile's European-held foreign debt while Allende was in power and was blamed by Chileans for their inability to get loans from the U.S. and Western Europe until Allende was overthrown.

COAL HARBOR WHARF RAZED

COAL HARBOR (CP) — A fire aboard a water taxi Wednesday night turned into a blaze that destroyed the government wharf, at least 12 pleasure boats, and six cars at this northern Vancouver Island community.

There were no injuries.

The water taxi, owned by Harry Hole of Coal Harbor, was tied to a float at the wharf when the fire started. The boat was cut loose from the float, but drifted under the main structure of the wharf, setting it afire.

The wooden wharf is 50 feet wide and 100 feet long. Part of the wooden structure of a 300-foot approach to the wharf was also destroyed.

Also lost in the fire were a freight shed and a fuel shed which contained gasoline and oil and contributed to the speed with which the wharf burned.

JUST NOT HIS DAY

NELSON (CP) — It just wasn't Jim Shkooratoff's Day.

When his car would not start, he poured gasoline into the carburator from a gallon jug. The engine backfired and ignited the gasoline in the jug. Then his thumb stuck in the jug handle.

He smashed the container on the ground and the gasoline spread to the basement entrance of his home, carrying the fire with it. Damage was minimal.

Man Dies In Ferry Plunge

A 50-year-old Mission man died Wednesday night after falling from a B.C. Ferry in Active Pass.

Sidney RCMP said today the man, Edward Haines, was a passenger aboard the 7 p.m. sailing of the Queen of Saanich, bound for Swartz Bay from Tsawwassen.

Police said people in a pleasure craft saw the man fall and picked him up and returned him to the ferry. Two doctors, passengers aboard the ferry, pronounced him dead.

Man Nabbed In Fatal Shooting

DUNCAN — Police here are holding a 24-year-old man in connection with a shooting incident which caused the death Wednesday of James Martin, 30, of Duncan.

Police said the shooting occurred about 6 p.m. at a residence on the Indian reserve near Tzouhalem Road.

Martin was pronounced dead on arrival at Cowichan District Hospital from gunshot wounds to the chest.

Doing the Job to Be Done

The Canadian contingent of the United Nations forces on Cyprus has been under fire and several members have been wounded. The position of the Canadians has at times been exposed to fire from both sides but the situation appears to have stabilized somewhat, with some 400 Canadian troops now holding the Nicosia airport. They apparently have received recognition from Greek and Turkish commands and the airport — at least for the moment — is not the target of either side.

It appears that the Canadians, who have been represented in Cyprus since the UN force was first assembled ten years ago, have contributed substantially to such a degree of order as it has been possible to establish. They could not, and were not expected to, enforce a ceasefire or engage in fighting on either side. But their notification to the warring factions that an attack on Canadian troops would constitute an attack on the United Nations has apparently had some effect. Within the limits imposed by their small numbers and their terms of reference, the Canadians have done the job for which they were originally sent to the embattled island.

It is surprising, then, that the Globe and Mail of Toronto should have embarked on a vigorous editorial attack on Canada's participation in the UN operation, on External Affairs Minister Sharp's judgment in keeping the troops on the scene, and in fact on any Canadian assistance in this or future UN peacekeeping operations. The editorial concludes that "it is time to bring them home."

The Globe and Mail does not offer any alternative employment for Canadian armed forces, but suggests that Canadian credibility in the world has been depreciated by a country that "has made its claim to impartiality so suspect by its readiness to serve as a waterboy to the American team." This is as low an assessment of Canadian troops and Canada's national reputation as has appeared anywhere, even in critical foreign quarters, and it is surprising that a Toronto publication should have been the medium for its expression to the world.

One needs go back only as far as Mr. Pearson's government to recall that Canada at that time took an earnest look at its military position among the nations, renounced the use of its armed forces to engage in aggression against any country, and, except for a basic recognition of the need to defend Canada at least on a minimum level, dedicated its forces to assisting the United Nations in the preservation of peace anywhere on the planet.

It was an inspiring concept in a world too readily prone to employ armed forces for national aggrandisement, and it set an example of the international viewpoint for peace that must ultimately become universal if the globe is to survive the nuclear age or enjoy any viable future.

In line with this fundamental policy, Canada has taken part in a number of United Nations operations to help maintain peace in trouble spots — Suez, the Congo, Cyprus are among them. We have contributed to an international system of peace-keeping which, while not always fully successful, has been a practical demonstration of United Nations ideals in time of strife, and one that is necessary if such a concept is to survive where it is so badly needed.

Far from indicating that Canadian forces should be recalled to Canada and kept in a nationalistic vacuum, the Canadian record abroad has been an honorable and exemplary one which fully merits continued adherence to the UN concept.

That concept is a comparatively new one in the world and should not be expected to enjoy full success for a long time to come. But willing nations must persevere in it and prove that its efficacy can be equal to the need. This task Canada is carrying out, and it would be a serious loss to the world community and to the cause of peace if we were now to default.

Twists and Turns on Impeachment

After 10 weeks of secret, if leaky debate, the United States' House Judiciary Committee considering President Nixon's impeachment opened its hearings to the public this week. Two years of Watergate and related government scandals have become tiresome, but the final conclusion of the judiciary committee on whether or not sufficient evidence exists to impeach the president will not be anti-climactic.

The 21 Democrats and 17 Republicans who comprise the committee are aware that their decision will have implications that reach around the world. If they are reasonable men, they are also pragmatic politicians with an eye on November's Congressional elections. Each committee member will want to ascertain which way the wind is blowing in his constituency before he casts his vote on impeachment.

So far the committee has appeared to divide along party lines as it sifted the mass of evidence presented in the last two and one-half months. Washington reporters note, however, that three southern Democrats will be under intense pressure to vote against impeachment as their constituencies equate Republicanism with Richard Nixon. On the other side of the fence, four or five Republican committee members have given indications that they will vote for impeachment.

If impeachment is recommended along party lines it could easily run aground in the House of Representatives where some Democrats might vote against the drastic step in order that their party would not be accused of grasping for the prize it lost in 1972. Other factors, such as public apathy on impeachment after an undiluted two-year Watergate diet, might persuade some congressmen to bury the question. Whichever way the vote goes it cannot help but alienate a large section of American public opinion.

For some time it has been plain that White House strategy revolves around stalling tactics, or "stonewalling," as the president is fond of saying. If impeachment proceedings were carried to the House of Representatives and bogged down until the 94th Congress was elected, the whole process would have to start anew after November. The American public would not likely tolerate a third year of Watergate.

Whatever the committee decides, the historic vote will probably be seen on television. To speculate on the outcome is futile and perhaps unfair. The only person who seems sure at this point is a Las Vegas oddsmaker named "Jimmy The Greek" who is betting 1,000 to 1 against successful impeachment. And, not unlike Richard Nixon, Jimmy the Greek likes to think of himself as a businessman rather than a gambler.

Is It Goodbye to Minorities?

OTTAWA — Pierre Trudeau is the first politician since Louis St. Laurent in 1953 to win a majority in the House of Commons by campaigning as a conventional party leader rather than as a populist exploiting extraordinary personal appeal.

The other two majorities of those two decades, John Diefenbaker's in 1958 and Trudeau's 10 years later, rested upon the special appeal of individuals. In the course of his transition from populist to conventional leader, Trudeau conducted the strange non-campaign of 1972, attempting a dialogue with the electorate rather than a fight for power

When the latest election came this spring, there was no question of what the prime minister sought. He wanted both to retain power in itself and the vindication of having done so, after the rebuff of 1972. He fought tooth and nail for those two goals and this is what conventional politicians do.

Important Question

An important question raised by this development, the success of the Liberal party under Trudeau's current style of leadership, is whether it will prove later on to have marked the end of the period of minority governments which had become normal, reflecting the divisions within the electorate.

There is, of course, no way of knowing the answer to that question at this point. It is reasonable to suppose though that the nature of a victory, the way in which power has been secured, may have some consequences. We have, at least for the moment, broken out of the situation in which majorities could only be secured as the result of an individual's personal appeal.

The effect on political parties of the victories won through their leader's charisma was mixed. The more time goes by, the more reasonable it seems to place among Diefenbaker's most important achievements the lasting improvement he brought about in the electoral strength of the Conservative party. For a quarter of a century after its 1930 victory, the Conservatives were not again a serious contender for power in this country. Their high-water point came in 1945 when 67 Conservatives were returned to the House but their strength declined again after that.

The Conservatives have only held power for six years since 1957 but they have been true contenders for it in every election since then. One effect of Diefenbaker's leadership was to bring the party back onto a higher plateau from which the heights of power do not look quite so distant. His impact on the party was traumatic in other ways, however, and the rift between the Western Conservatives and those from Ontario and the East which opened up in the 1960s has never been fully healed.

Diefenbaker himself did not use his standing as an enormously popular Western leader in an effort to heal the national rift that opens at the Ontario-Manitoba border. He seemed to share the Prairies suspicion of the East too deeply to be able to rise above it in the way that a successful effort at reconciliation would have required, an opportunity lost because he too was trapped by some of the deepest Canadian emotions.

JOHN DIEFENBAKER
. . . special appeal

Later on, in the fight over his succession, the East-West rift in his party was exacerbated. It remains a serious factor today, with the new twist that more than half of the present Conservative members come from west of Ontario.

Trudeau's success in securing the Liberal leadership transformed that party's sagging morale and sense of defeatism overnight. His rise to power was accompanied by an effort to introduce a new style to government and to his party which did not work out well. In the first portion of his tenure an enormous concentration of effort and attention on the structures of government became disproportionate to the work being achieved. New channels of communication were sought and old ones neglected.

It was the day of "participatory democracy" and a genuine effort was to tap the grass roots of the Liberal party to develop new policies. When they had been formulated, however, they were largely ignored. During that first term enough of the party's old hands were discouraged and alienated that the effects were visible in 1972. The party of the 1972 campaign was neither effective nor enthusiastic.

The prime minister himself gave it no lift, the close associates who had acquired great influence under his wing earned reputations for sterile theorizing and impracticality and the party ended the campaign with sour feelings paramount.

The most significant electoral move Trudeau made afterwards was to turn back to some of the people who had been important in the party during Pearson's time. The technocrats had delivered disappointment and the enthusiasm of a Keith Davey obviously had great appeal. Sen. Davey has the ability to enthuse his troops and his nickname, the Rainmaker, is more affectionate than critical among Liberals. Right now it is probably wholly affectionate.

More Effective

The party itself was both more important and more effective in this campaign than in 1972, and it was not submerged by leadership charisma as in 1968. I think it is true that the Liberals are a healthier political organism than they have been for some time.

Whether we have taken a step towards a lasting return to majority government is another question. It seems to me that the shift in balance among the Liberals between leadership and party probably would work to favor this, but other factors are likely to be more important. At the top of that list one would put the perennial Canadian problem, the Western distrust of central Canadian power and economic strength. Success at healing the old sore would permanently change the nature of political life in this country.

The East-West problem is not the only factor. Developments within the Conservative and New Democratic parties will also be of great consequence. The more each of them holds a firm and well-rooted role in the country, the more they curb the Liberals' near-monopoly on power. The more they do that, the more likely minority Parliaments are, unless the Conservatives can do what the Liberals have just achieved: win power through the efforts of a party under conventional leadership.

CHARLES BARTLETT

Weights in the Trade Balance

WASHINGTON — It is the eleventh hour for the trade bill, a measure which may induce the Western nations to hang together through economic adversities that can cause them to hang separately.

The next Congress will almost certainly refuse to authorize the President to negotiate lower tariffs if this Congress fails to act. A "veto-proof" Congress will be dominated by the AFL-CIO, now earnestly aligned against free trade, so there will be little hope of salvaging the prospects for commerce. The alternative may be a bleak, destructive return to narrow nationalism. The result could be a world depression.

Risks Obscured

These risks have been obscured by the Senate's focus on the travails of the Soviet Jews. The entire trade bill is snagged on a provision that would enable the President to apply normal tariff rates to Soviet exports. The Jackson-Vanik amendment, precluding grants of credits to the Soviet Union so long as Jews are kept from emigrating or harassed when they try to emigrate, is lashed onto the bill. Only a deal can produce a measure which the President will be willing to sign.

The obstacle to a deal is the Soviets' refusal to furnish guarantees that Jews who try to leave the country will no longer lose their jobs, apartments and other privileges. The Kremlin rejects guarantees as an intrusion on its control of domestic policy. On the other hand, Sens. Henry Jackson (D.-Wash.) and Abraham Ribicoff (D.-Conn.) are not asking for a signed contract, but they do want solid assurance.

All sides claim privately they have given ground. The Soviets have increased their exit quotas, Jackson is talking more flexibly, even saying he does not expect everyone to get out. The State Department has agreed to a procedure which is certain to annoy the Soviets, a review process that will facilitate Congress's right to restore restrictions if the Jewish emigration is blocked again.

The troubling uncertainty is how much of the obduracy in the Senate is linked to the AFL-CIO's distaste for the whole trade proposal. The Jewish issue is the only certain way to block the trade bill because the other issues can be resolved. Democrats anxious for the good opinion of George Meany are going to be tempted to ride the Jewish issue all the way.

This strategy will be apt to serve Meany better than it serves the Jews in both countries. Russian leaders, denied the economic fruits for which they have been waging the diplomacy of detente, may translate their disappointment into a more virulent anti-Semitism. This country's free traders, denied the opportunities of a trade negotiation, are certain to be critical of the Jewish community for locking human rights and economics into one unmanageable bag of issues.

A basic miscalculation among the Senate obdurates may be an exaggeration of the Kremlin's reliance on enlarged commerce with the United States. The opinion of the best experts is that they do not need access to American capital or technology to survive or keep their system from falling to pieces. They do need it to develop Siberia and improve the quality of their consumer goods. But those are not objectives for which they will be willing to tolerate major transformations in their system.

Normal Principle

The Jackson-Vanik group has been right to raise the human rights issue as a matter of moral principle. To come to grips with problems like inflation, nuclear weapons, energy and pollution, the great nations are going to have to tolerate intrusions on their domestic authority. Civilization will not long tolerate different standards of freedom just as it cannot long afford nationalistic responses to international problems.

But the U.S. trade deficit ran at the annual rate of $9 billions in May and there is worse to come. Western nations are experiencing tremors of apprehension which can swiftly sour the free world economy. This is a dangerous time to reject the trade bill's potential to lead toward new thresholds of co-operation. Labor's concern with the export of jobs and the human rights concern with Soviet emigration policies must not be allowed to obscure the importance of a sound trade policy.

Sooke Day Shuttle Service

A significant number of Victorians are entitled to an explanation as to why they were stranded with no shuttle bus transportation such as has been provided in years past for the All-Sooke Day festivities in Sooke.

In recent years, car parking has been provided in large areas a mile or so from the fairgrounds, and shuttle buses were available from South West coach Lines and its predecessor, the Sooke Stage. This arrangement worked out reasonably well. This year, car parking was permitted in the fairground itself. With heavy car traffic in and out of Phillips Road, as well as two-way. Both sides parking along Phillips Road, operation of buses was a physical impossibility.

In addition, traffic control, previously handled capably by the RCMP, was entirely in the hands of the members of a local radio club, and the resulting traffic tieups were gargantuan.

The upshot of all of this was that all bus service was suspended in the interest of public safety at 11:30 a.m., and the buses were sent home. One bus was left behind in Sooke to accommodate persons wishing to ride back into Victoria, if they were able to walk from the Fairgrounds up to the end of Phillips road.

Many people were greatly inconvenienced by the forced interruption of bus service, including many elderly persons who had been looking forward to a pleasant outing for the day, and many persons for years have relied on the ready availability of the Sooke shuttle buses. To these people, our sincerest regrets for their discomfort. We did not wish to curtail the service, and did so only after much deliberation about public convenience versus public safety.

We sincerely hope that for All-Sooke Day 1975, those in charge of organizing the traffic and parking arrangements will realize that buses cannot be operated in and out of the Sooke river Flats in direct competition with thousands of parked cars in the fairgrounds area. We hope that we will again be able to provide a shuttle bus service as our part of All-Sooke Day. — South West Coach Lines Ltd., James Golightly.

ST. PETERSBURG — At least five striking workmen were killed and eight seriously wounded during the fighting in the streets of St. Petersburg between strikers and Cossacks which continued throughout the night and ceased only at dawn this morning. Three police officials are also known to have been seriously injured. The figures quoted are official, but it is generally understood that the casualties among the strikers were much heavier, as it is believed they concealed a number of their dead and wounded. Official returns of the number of men who have quit work in this city number 120,000. Men carrying red flags are marching and singing revolutionary songs in the outlying parts of the city.

The appointment of Arthur Goldberg as chief negotiator for the American aluminum companies in their running dispute with Jamaica — prime source of their bauxite — may defuse an explosive issue.

Justice Goldberg is an experienced labor negotiator and a long-time acquaintance of Jamaican Prime Minister Michael Manley, who previously headed the National Workers Union, which includes Jamaica's 9,500 bauxite workers.

The former Supreme Court justice and U.S. ambassador to the United Nations will be a prestigious advocate whose recommendations may be expected to carry weight with the powerful aluminum interests who have hired him.

The simmering quarrel with Jamaica, which has just announced its intention to up its annual "take" from U.S. and Canadian mining interests eight times — from approximately $25 million to around $200 million — comes at a time when the Nixon administration is still highly sensitive to anything faintly resembling another "economic war."

The Arab use of oil as a weapon during and after last autumn's Yom Kippur war, and especially its sudden shock effect on a complacent American society, left ripples that still can be perceived.

Recent — somewhat confused — efforts by seven Latin American banana-producing countries to levy unilateral export taxes on fruit mainly for the U.S. market; moves by the world's six chief mercury producers to organize to hoard output and boost prices; formation in Conakry, Guinea in March of the International Bauxite Association, headquartered in Kingston, Jamaica — all these are worrying trends.

Domestic Popularity

It is not the true "cartel" that concerns Washington economists so much as sporadic actions by less developed producer countries determined, in some cases for domestic political popularity, to offset rising prices of vital imports by "soaking" buyers of their products.

The true "cartel" is highly disciplined: it maintains tight control over output; it keeps reserve stocks on hand; it discourages competition from rival producers; it discourages its customers from switching to substitutes; it keeps prices high. The diamond producers — and to a lesser extent the gold and platinum producers — are true cartels.

But the cartel implies orderly production and distribution. The Arab-inspired oil "embargo" was temporarily disruptive of economies in the U.S., West Europe and Japan but essentially it was disorderly. Some OPEC members cut back production (Saudi Arabia, Libya); others expanded to reap windfall profits (Iran, Iraq, Nigeria, Indonesia among others); some "embargoed" oil shipments to the U.S.; others winked at lucrative violations.

The Arab example has served to stimulate some of the less sophisticated raw material producers to link price rises for their exports to price rises for their vital imports.

In the early 1950s — 10 years before Jamaica won its independence from Great Britain — the American aluminum companies, headed by Reynolds, began buying bauxite reserves in Jamaica. By the 1960s Kaiser, Alcoa, Revere and Anaconda — plus Canada's Alcan — had moved in, too.

GOLDBERG
. . . mediator

Inexperienced and compliant, Jamaican governments arranged easy taxes solely on "profits" which, because the companies owned the ore and were merely transferring it or its second-stage, alumina power, to parent companies in the U.S. or Canada, were remarkably light.

In recent years Jamaica has been netting about $25 million yearly for 15 million tons worth of bauxite or alumina worth on the U.S. market $175 million to $350 million. One ton of bauxite costs about $15 (it is rising to $22 shortly) but finished aluminum ingot, for example, is now selling at more than $600 per ton.

Two years ago the cost of living in Jamaica rose five per cent, last year, 20 per cent. Oil imports — used largely for processing bauxite into alumina — soared from $50 million to $150 million. Wheat imported for the vital U.S.-Canadian tourist trade rose from $2.25 a bushel 18 months ago to $6 and now is settling around $3 to $3.50. Other imports rose accordingly.

They Got Message

To offset price rises in imports — over which it had no control — Prime Minister Manley's government decided to raise the yield from the foreign aluminum companies whose activities it could control. Last year Manley suggested talks. His words fell on deaf ears. In mid-March this year, when talks finally began in Kingston, aluminum negotiators were slow at first to get Manley's message. By mid-May when the talks deadlocked, however, the aluminum giants had agreed to raise overall payments from $25 million to $80 million — but the Jamaicans refused to drop below the additional $200 million that they estimate they will have to pay the oil and other industrial producers this year and every year as far as anyone can see.

Manley has got approval of Parliament (where he has the votes) for legislation to: boost aluminum royalties and taxes to around $200 million; link these payments not to "profits" (which turned out — on paper at least — to be virtually invisible) but to the finished aluminum ingot prices in the U.S.; fix minimum yearly production at 14 million tons.

In addition he intends to win a "stake" or equity participation for Jamaica in each company, whether by stock transfers or the issuance of new stock.

"Jamaica is the only bauxite producer in the world," said one Jamaican official, "that doesn't own a penny of its own chief industry. Bauxite provides 40 per cent of our foreign earnings — twice what we earn from tourism."

Like so many sun-splashed, palm-fringed tourist meccas in the Caribbean, Jamaica is a tinderbox. Nearly half its two million inhabitants are 14 or younger. Population is growing at three to four per cent yearly and every year sees tens of thousands of young men and women jamming into a labor market with virtually no chance of jobs. Crime — especially teenaged crime — is rising and the Manley government has responded with tough new gun laws and "gun courts."

From the U.S. viewpoint an open break with Jamaica over "money" issues would be serious. The ripple effect would be grave throughout an already sullen Caribbean where Jamaica's example is closely watched. Talks are due to resume in Kingston soon and the hope is that Manley, a respected, moderate figure (and the son of Sir Norman Manley, a pioneer of Jamaican independence) will exert his considerable influence for a friendly settlement.

Another Vietnam Casualty

By HAYNES JOHNSON
The Washington Post

In the present preoccupation with Watergate, John Ehrlichman's case is a reminder that another kind of poison affected America in recent years. It was the war, not Watergate, that brought Ehrlichman down.

As such, Ehrlichman is the latest in that long line of casualties from Vietnam. Not the combat from the front, of course, but the bitter conflicts at home that grew out of the war and divided the nation more sharply than any time in a century.

He was too old to wear a uniform when the war began back in the early sixties, but when circumstances propelled him to a position of power in Washington years later, he and the rest of the president's men wore their patriotism like a badge.

They wore small American flags in their lapels wherever they went. It was more than a symbolic gesture: They seemed genuinely to believe their actions, however they stretched the law, were justified in defending the nation from enemies here and abroad.

In fact, by the time they came to power, the flag had become a symbol of national division instead of unity. The America they saw from the confines of their White House offices was an America in turmoil. Protestors and dissent and bombings and bitterness.

"No one who had been in the White House could help but feel he was in a state of siege," Tom Huston recalled of that period early in the Nixon administration when secret intelligence operations were put in motion in the name of national security. "They were jumping on you from all sides. It seemed that no one ever liked what was done in Vietnam."

Ehrlichman and the others knew what the war had done to destroy the Johnson administration. It tore the Democratic party in two. And now it was threatening to engulf Nixon's men.

When American ground forces were ordered into Cambodia in the spring of 1970, a wave of demonstrations swept the country here at home. At their height, the president appeared before a group of Pentagon employees and said: "You know, you see these bums, you know, blowing up the campuses. Listen, the boys on the college campuses today are the luckiest people in the world . . . and there they are burning up the books, storming around on this issue."

Days later, Kent State, four dead, and the nation in trauma. "This should remind us all once again that when dissent turns to violence it invites tragedy," the president said.

It was out of that context and state of mind that the Nixon administration began to take action to improve the gathering of domestic intelligence. They were themselves caught up in a climate of war-time, besieged and beleagured and seeing themselves surrounded by enemies.

"Surreptitious entry" — a polite term for burglary — was proposed and approved at the White House.

Also approved were increased electronic eavesdropping operations on American citizens, employment of informants, and the illegal opening of mail. When the Pentagon Papers were leaked to the press, laying bare government secrets on Vietnam, the creation of the White House "plumbers" came as an almost inevitable outcome.

For John Ehrlichman, who had come out of Seattle as a real estate attorney and risen to one of the most powerful positions in the country, it was, it seems, easy to accept the old notion that the ends justified the means.

He was a believer in the president and his point of view. He was also a believer in our role in Vietnam.

He had served in the Army Air Corps during the Second World War, flew 26 bombing missions over Germany and had received the Distinguished Flying Cross. His own father had tried to enlist, but was rejected as too old, and then went to Canada in its air force where he lost his life in a plane crash.

Like millions of others of his generation, John Ehrlichman went to college on the GI bill. Those who knew him then remember him as hard-working, quiet, competent and possessed of a dry sense of humor.

EHRLICHMAN
. . . misguided patriotism

"He was the last guy you consider capable of dishonesty, of unethically influencing a court," said one of his classmates, Paul McCloskey, now a Republican congressman from California.

But he became caught up in the clash of attitudes over the seemingly endless war, between the patriots and the traitors, the enemies and the righteous. He never seems to have questioned his role. He really was, it would appear, acting in the name of national security — and, by definition, the national interest.

He became a household name because of Watergate and Ellsberg and his merciless exposure before the television cameras. The portrait that emerged, in the minds of many, was not flattering. He was called arrogant, harsh, unfeeling, pompous, although Richard Nixon had referred to him as "my right arm."

As Mr. Nixon's chief of staff for domestic affairs, he had wielded enormous influence in the life of Washington and the nation. Now he had fallen, still expressing confidence in his ultimate vindication, still confident that his actions were proper.

The prosecutor, William Merrill, saw it in a different light and proposed a different question for the jurors — and philosophically for John Ehrlichman.

Violations of constitutional rights against illegal searches cannot be condoned, he said. "This isn't patriotism, this is anarchy."

"We fought a revolution to establish these rights. They cannot be violated by people who turn their backs and close their eyes."

The jury agreed.

British Columbia's New Boss Liberal

By DAVID ABLETT

OTTAWA — The Honorable Stanley Ronald Basford, Minister of State for Urban Affairs, Member of Parliament for Vancouver Centre, is now unquestionably the number one federal Liberal in B.C.

To him will come the ministers seeking advice on patronage and programs and from him will flow the advice providing the peculiarly British Columbian contours of national programs and national legislation.

BASFORD
. . . another ministry?

His new authority comes as much from Environment Minister Jack Davis' defeat on July 8 as it does from his own victory and seven other victories in the province.

Now, for the first time in almost two decades, there is a single minister who is clearly the man to go to on questions about British Columbia. Not since James Sinclair dominated B.C. federal politics in the early fifties has this been the case.

Since Sinclair's defeat in 1958, the leadership in the federal wing of the B.C. party has been a clutter.

When Basford arrived on the federal scene in 1963, the sachems of federal liberalism in B.C. were Arthur Laing and Jack Nicholson. Nicholson left in 1968 to become lieutenant-governor of B.C. Mr. Laing stayed on until 1972, when he went to his political reward in the Senate.

Davis had arrived in Ottawa a year earlier than Basford. He would enjoy seniority and precedence in cabinet as long as he could survive politically.

As Basford rose, he always found Davis slightly ahead of him.

In the parliament of minorities just ended, Basford and Davis were in uneasy harness together. Just how uneasy was demonstrated in L'affaire Bill Rathie.

Rathie, a former mayor of Vancouver, had angered some important constituents of Basford's with his actions in harbor matters. Rathie had been appointed to the harbor board on the advice of Davis.

When Basford suggested publicly that Rathie be fired, Davis demurred.

And Transport Minister Jean Marchand, who had the hiring and firing authority, took one look at Basford on the south side of the harbor and Davis on the north, and decided he had best leave things as they are. Rathie stayed, although he must now be the least secure of federal Liberal appointees in B.C.

In addition, Basford and Davis were not philosophically attuned. Basford leans to the economic nationalism that was inherent in the oil export tax controversy. Davis disliked the export tax.

Len Marchand of Kamloops is in line to join Basford in cabinet. He would be the first person of Indian descent to serve in the cabinet.

But he is no challenger to Basford. Nor, for the moment, are the six other B.C. members, rookies all.

As the undisputed chief of the B.C. party, Basford now must try to root the party in the lives of British Columbians — or to put it another way, to solidify the surprising gains of July 8 and prepare a base for expansion.

He will feel pressure on the left from a bloodied NDP and, on the right, from a strong Conservative Party. The emerging leader of the B.C. Tory caucus is John Fraser of Vancouver South.

But Basford is not at all unhappy about what he considers the realignment of the B.C. electorate that July 8 brought. The Liberals have lost their base in the wealthy ridings — Davis' was the last to go — but they have found a new one in territory that has been traditionally NDP.

To hold this base, he has to demonstrate that the Liberal party is the natural home of this suburban, middle-and-working-class, centre-left constituency.

Obviously, he would like to get his hands on a cabinet post suited to this end.

Since he arrived in the cabinet, he has been caught in two political minefields — consumer affairs and urban affairs. The first was blamed for prices and could do nothing about them, for the minister of finance is the real minister of prices. And there was little credit and a great deal of blame in urban affairs, an area which is primarily a provincial responsibility.

Basford's choice would be transport, if his was the choice to make. Transport is a major department, one that has a major impact on B.C. and specifically on Vancouver. The harbor is inadequate, the railways spear into the heart of the city and the airport is a continuing problem.

But others also have a claim on transport. Otto Lang is one, and the concerns of his Prairie constituency are founded as much in transport as are the concerns of Vancouver. John Turner is another although Turner's main concern seems to be get out of finance.

For Basford, there is also the possibility of energy, mines and resources, a department also of major importance to B.C., but not as useful from his point of view as transport.

Decisions on these matters will have to wait on the prime minister. For the moment, it is clear, the clutter at the top of the B.C. federal Liberals has gone. Whether that bodes good or ill for the Liberal party in B.C. largely depends on Basford.

Try a Slug for Supper

By HARRY BRUCE

HALIFAX — Since the price of food may never stop rising, we should all think hard about exactly what we're prepared to eat. Insects, for instance. Bradford Angier, in his paperback classic How to Stay Alive in the Woods, advises:

"Moths, mayflies, in fact almost all the insects found in the woods, are very palatable . . . a small light at night will get you all the insects you need to keep you in good condition. If the weather is too cold for flying insects, kick open some rotten logs or look under stones and get some grubs. They keep bears fat and healthy and will do the same for you."

Munching grasshoppers — first, be sure to remove the hard legs and wings — may strike you as disgusting, but then millions of people think eating pork chops is disgusting. The Japanese find dragon flies delightful fare and, as food prices rise and disappear among the cirrus clouds, the thing to remember is that nothing is so artificial as your convictions about what's good eating.

So far as food choices are concerned, all of us are victims of long term fashion, and our feelings of both repugnance and pleasure depend on cultural inheritance, religious taboos, ideas about status, a host of mental attitudes that have nothing at all to do with bodily nourishment.

It's not your palate that makes you recoil from Angier's advice on how to eat in the wilderness. It's just your mind. Otherwise, you might accept his suggestion that you thicken your vegetable soup with rabbit dung, and prepare birds and small animals for the pot simply by beating them to a pulp, bones, entrails and all.

The only force that wipes out our irrational food prejudices is the urge to survive terrible odds, People who happily gulp down blood pudding from the supermarket think drinking blood is a hideous proposition. But shipwrecked mariners, lost in mid-Pacific, have learned to stop worrying and love fresh turtle blood. Especially if they can get it down before it coagulates.

North Americans eat 100 million pounds of oysters a year, and most oyster-eaters regard these slippery little devils, taken raw, as heaven on the half-shell, and yet, the odds are that these same gourmets would gag over the raw fish that Polynesians and Japanese relish. (Eskimos, of course, prefer their raw fish old enough to be high.)

If we call snails escargots, and drench them with garlic and butter, they become a delicacy but garden slugs, as human food, remain an abomination. We shell out $7 for a plateful of fried frogs' legs but, so far as I know anyway, no restaurant has ever put a toad to the taste test.

The attitude of some Maritimers towards lobster is a perfect example of the way thought dominates taste. Once, in Ottawa, I served lobster that I thought was gustatory ecstasy to a public servant named Helen Wilson. Well, what else would I serve to an intelligent and handsome young woman from Wilson's Cove, Nova Scotia?

Years later, however, I picked up Helen's book (Tales from Barrett's Landing) about her childhood during hard times-down-home, and I suddenly understood why I should have given her a spaghetti dinner.

"We ate lobster because we were poor," she wrote. "I remember that sometimes Mama put fresh boiled lobster in our school lunches and we always threw them away on our way to school. We were ashamed to let the other kids see them because then they would know that we didn't have anything else to eat in the house."

A lot of Newfoundlanders catch and sell lobster but refuse to eat it. They know that lobsters (like pigs, at times) feed on the dead. Moreover, even if the nearby shores are alive with thousands of juicy, succulent clams, an outport housewife may regard it as the height of her hospitality to serve a visitor a treasured can of clams from Japan.

Some people eat a lot of rabbit because that's about all they can get. To them, it will always be bum eating. Some people eat rabbit only a few times in their liver, and they go to toney restaurants to find it. To them it will always be exotic dining.

If it's plentiful, then it can't be good. If it's cheap it's garbage. If it's scarce it's worth loving and, as more and more food becomes more and more scarce, we may find that what we once thought detestable is fast becoming lovable.

As the undisputed chief of the B.C. party, Basford now must try to root the party in the lives of British Columbians — or, to put it another way, to solidify the surprising gains of July 8 and prepare a base for expansion.

He will feel pressure on the left from a bloodied NDP and, on the right, from a strong Conservative Party. The emerging leader of the B.C. Tory caucus is John Fraser of Vancouver South.

But Basford is not at all unhappy about what he considers the realignment of the B.C. electorate that July 8 brought. The Liberals have lost their base in the wealthy ridings — Davis' was the last to go — but they have found a new one in territory that has been traditionally NDP.

To hold this base, he has to demonstrate that the Liberal party is the natural home of this suburban, middle-and-working-class, centre-left constituency.

Obviously, he would like to get his hands on a cabinet post suited to this end.

Since he arrived in the cabinet, he has been caught in two political minefields — consumer affairs and urban affairs. The first was blamed for prices and could do nothing about them, for the minister of finance is the real minister of prices. And there was little credit and a great deal of blame in urban affairs, an area which is primarily a provincial responsibility.

Basford's choice would be transport, if his was the choice to make. Transport is a major department, one that has a major impact on B.C. and specifically on Vancouver. The harbor is inadequate, the railways spear into the heart of the city and the airport is a continuing problem.

But others also have a claim on transport. Otto Lang is one, and the concerns of his Prairie constituency are founded as much in transport as are the concerns of Vancouver. John Turner is another although Turner's main concern seems to be get out of finance.

For Basford, there is also the possibility of energy, mines and resources, a department also of major importance to B.C., but not as useful from his point of view as transport.

Decisions on these matters will have to wait on the prime minister. For the moment, it is clear, the clutter at the top of the B.C. federal Liberals has gone. Whether that bodes good or ill for the Liberal party in B.C. largely depends on Basford.

Try a Slug for Supper

By HARRY BRUCE

HALIFAX — Since the price of food may never stop rising, we should all think hard about exactly what we're prepared to eat. Insects, for instance. Bradford Angier, in his paperback classic How to Stay Alive in the Woods, advises:

"Moths, mayflies, in fact almost all the insects found in the woods, are very palatable . . . a small light at night will get you all the insects you need to keep you in good condition. If the weather is too cold for flying insects, kick open some rotten logs or look under stones and get some grubs. They keep bears fat and healthy and will do the same for you."

Munching grasshoppers — first, be sure to remove the hard legs and wings — may strike you as disgusting, but then millions of people think eating pork chops is disgusting. The Japanese find dragon flies delightful fare and, as food prices rise and disappear among the cirrus clouds, the thing to remember is that nothing is so artificial as your convictions about what's good eating.

So far as food choices are concerned, all of us are victims of long term fashion, and our feelings of both repugnance and pleasure depend on cultural inheritance, religious taboos, ideas about status, a host of mental attitudes that have nothing at all to do with bodily nourishment.

It's not your palate that makes you recoil from Angier's advice on how to eat in the wilderness. It's just your mind. Otherwise, you might accept his suggestion that you thicken your vegetable soup with rabbit dung, and prepare birds and small animals for the pot simply by beating them to a pulp, bones, entrails and all.

The only force that wipes out our irrational food prejudices is the urge to survive terrible odds. People who happily gulp down blood pudding from the supermarket think drinking blood is a hideous proposition. But shipwrecked mariners, lost in mid-Pacific, have learned to stop worrying and love fresh turtle blood. Especially if they can get it down before it coagulates.

North Americans eat 100 million pounds of oysters a year, and most oyster-eaters regard these slippery little devils, taken raw, as heaven on the half-shell, and yet, the odds are that these same gourmets would gag over the raw fish that Polynesians and Japanese relish. (Eskimos, of course, prefer their raw fish old enough to be high.)

If we call snails escargots, and drench them with garlic and butter, they become a delicacy but garden slugs, as human food, remain an abomination. We shell out $7 for a plateful of fried frogs' legs but, so far as I know anyway, no restaurant has ever put a toad to the taste test.

The attitude of some Maritimers towards lobster is a perfect example of the way thought dominates taste. Once, in Ottawa, I served lobster that I thought was gustatory ecstasy to a public servant named Helen Wilson. Well, what else would I serve to an intelligent and handsome young woman from Wilson's Cove, Nova Scotia?

Years later, however, I picked up Helen's book (Tales from Barrett's Landing) about her childhood during hard times-down-home, and I suddenly understood why I should have given her a spaghetti dinner.

"We ate lobster because we were poor," she wrote. "I remember that sometimes Mama put fresh boiled lobster in our school lunches and we always threw them away on our way to school. We were ashamed to let the other kids see them because then they would know that we didn't have anything else to eat in the house."

A lot of Newfoundlanders catch and sell lobster but refuse to eat it. They know that lobsters (like pigs, at times) feed on the dead. Moreover, even if the nearby shores are alive with thousands of juicy, succulent clams, an outport housewife may regard it as the height of her hospitality to serve a visitor a treasured can of clams from Japan.

Some people eat a lot of rabbit because that's about all they can get. To them, it will always be bum eating. Some people eat rabbit only a few times in their liver, and they go to toney restaurants to find it. To them it will always be exotic dining.

If it's plentiful, then it can't be good. If it's cheap it's garbage. If it's scarce it's worth loving and, as more and more food becomes more and more scarce, we may find that what we once thought detestable is fast becoming lovable.

Election Act Changes Defended by Province

VANCOUVER (CP) — A provincial official Wednesday defended recent changes in the Municipal Elections Act against criticism from West Vancouver's municipal manager.

Ted Whelen, an executive officer with the municipal affairs department, said that the amendments under criticism were "just the first step" in a process that would end in the integration of B.C.'s provincial and municipal voters lists.

Whelen, who helped draw up amendments to the elections act approved earlier this year by the legislature, was commenting on statements by Terry Lester.

Lester said the amendments will create "an administrative nightmare" for municipal officials.

Under the amendment, if a resident moves from one area to another, the municipality into which he moves must determine where the new resident came from and send a letter to that municipality telling them to delete his name from their list.

This procedure could result in a vast and confusing exchange of correspondence, Lester said.

Whelen said he thought batches of such letters could be sent once a month or so.

"Under the new system, everyone has to register," he said.

"It is the first step in legislation that will bring municipal and provincial lists into line."

FRUIT MAN REMANDED 3 MONTHS

VANCOUVER (CP) — Robert Kennedy, 46, of Oliver, was remanded until Oct. 29 when he appeared in court here Wednesday charged with operating a fruit stand without a vendor's licence.

Kennedy, an Okanagan orchardist, was earlier charged with obstruction and assaulting a police officer following an incident July 17. He said he had been selling cherries and apples at the spot since July 1.

★

VANCOUVER (CP) — The government plans to establish a bail hostel here to house accused persons awaiting trial.

John Ekstedt, executive director of planning and development in the corrections branch of the attorney-general's department, said Wednesday funds for the hostel have been approved but no site has been found.

★

VANCOUVER (CP) — Negotiations resumed Wednesday in a dispute between forest industry firms and 96 operating engineers who work in power plants in nine British Columbia mills.

Fears were earlier expressed that walkouts would begin Wednesday despite a call by Local 882 business manager Bill Kadey for the men to stay on the job.

The talks continued Wednesday with the mediator present, and further meetings were scheduled for today.

★

CRESTON (CP) — Cecil Hamilton was sentenced Wednesday to three years in jail after pleading guilty to bombing a police car. The charge was laid after an empty police car was bombed outside Creston RCMP headquarters April 3. A second charge of making a threatening phone call was withdrawn.

★

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Negotiations between The Citizen and 19 members of the International Typographical Union Local 868 continued here Wednesday following a company proposal based on a nine-month interim agreement.

The talks are aimed at settling a dispute which prevented publication of the five-day-a-week evening newspaper for three days two weeks ago.

★

VANCOUVER (CP) — The provincial government will not allow the Cypress Bowl road to be used to open up new development on Hollyburn Ridge, parks branch director Bob Ahrens said Wednesday.

"Provincial policy on the road is that it is a limited access highway," Ahrens said.

He confirmed Mayor Art Langley's statement at a West Vancouver council meeting that the municipality had been "turned down flat" by Victoria on its request for access from the new road to the cabin area on Hollyburn.

★

VANCOUVER (CP) — A meeting on transit for Greater Vancouver has been called for Tuesday by Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer but Mayor Art Phillips says is still unhappy.

The meeting, to be attended by elected representatives of the Greater Vancouver regional district and its component municipalities, is likely to turn into "just a gabfest," he said.

"That's not what we asked for," Phillips said. "I doubt if all those people will want to talk about a subway for downtown Vancouver, which is what we want to talk about."

CONCERT SET

Country music and organ music will highlight a program offered Sunday at the Cameron Bandshell in Beacon Hill Park, beginning at 2:30 p.m.

Performers include Reginald Stone playing the Conn organ, Peter Chipman with guitar and folk songs; singer Marg Grant and a country music group, Redwing.

Autoplan Against Ottawa —Lawyer

VANCOUVER (CP) — Autoplan has the effect of repealing parts of federal statutes, a British Columbia supreme court judge was told Wednesday.

Douglas Mck. Brown, representing 37 private insurance companies seeking to have the legislation invalidated, was pointing out that such firms are each incorporated by acts of the federal government to carry on the business of insurance, including the insurance of automobiles.

The lawyer reminded Mr. Justice J. S. Aikins of evidence showing that one private insurance firm in B.C. — Motors Insurance Company — had engaged solely in automobile coverage.

"For all practical purposes, its incorporating act has been repealed by the province," he said. "And if all the provinces did it, the repeal would be total.

"The provinces would have affected an amendment to the dominion incorporating legislation by striking out the words automobile insurance," said Brown.

"Similarly there are other companies while having additional powers do not use them and engage only in automobile insurance. for practical purposes, they are in the same position.

"The defendant (the B.C. attorney-general) has endeavored to stifle the outcry of motors insurance company by allowing it to solicit property insurance on automobiles at dealers' lots," he said.

He called this "an attempt in meaningless fashion to prevent that particular company from saying that it has been wholly destoyed within the province."

Electric rate increases: the reasons why.

In order to meet the rising costs of providing service, B.C. Hydro's electric rates will be increased for all categories of customers.

For residential customers, the increase will be up to 20%; for large industrial customers, the increase will be 50 to 55%; for bulk power users, approximately 70%. Revisions of other non-residential rates, including general rates for commercial customers, are still under review and will be announced soon.

Inflation Affects B.C. Hydro, too

B.C. Hydro experiences the effects of inflation in many areas, just as you do. In addition to higher wages and salaries, higher material costs and interest rates, B.C. Hydro is faced with increases in fuel costs and new expenditures for environmental protection measures. Among the latter are:

- ☐ Advance studies of environmental and social impact of all potential new power projects.
- ☐ Measures to offset and compensate for effects of projects approved for development.
- ☐ Improved clearing standards for new reservoirs and clearing programs to transform a number of older reservoirs into attractive recreation areas.

Prices Rise Rapidly

Since the last increase in B.C. Hydro's residential electric rates in 1970, there have been tremendous inflationary pressures affecting our capital expenditure and operating costs.

Let's look at some of the changes during that time. Since 1970, the price of diesel oil has increased 80 per cent. Bunker C oil has risen more than 200 per cent.

The retail consumer price index for British Columbia increased 24 per cent between 1970 and 1974, from 121.8 to 150.6. The Canadian general wholesale index has gone up even faster during those four years, from 289.9 to 444.5—an increase of 53 per cent.

STANDARD RESIDENTIAL RATES* (Expressed on Monthly Basis)
Present Rate	New Rate
1st 300 kwh at 3¢ per kwh All additional at 1.1¢ per kwh Minimum charge $2.00	1st 300 kwh at 3.6¢ per kwh All additional at 1.3¢ per kwh Minimum charge $2.40
*Excluding Diesel Areas.

Increase Less Than $3 Per Month On Most Bills

- ☐ On 78% of residential customers' bills (those with monthly consumption below 900 Kilowatt hours) the increase will amount to less than $3.00 per month.
- ☐ For customers who are at the monthly minimum level (66 kwh or less) the increase will be only 40¢.

COMPARATIVE CHARGES FOR RESIDENTIAL CONSUMPTION
Monthly KWH	Used By	Present Rates	New Rates	Increase
100	Apartment—No electric space or water heating.	$ 3.00	$ 3.60	$ 0.60
200		6.00	7.20	1.20
400	House—No electric space or water heating.	10.10	12.10	2.00
700		13.40	16.00	2.60
800	House—electric water heating.	14.50	17.30	2.80
1200		18.90	22.50	3.60
1500	House—electric space and water heating.	22.20	26.40	4.20
*3000		38.70	45.90	7.20

The above are examples only. Use by individual customers varies with area, size of residence, number in family, living habits, etc.

 Sales tax not included.*

These new residential rates go into effect on and after August 1, 1974, although the increase will not show on most customers' bills until October 1 or later, depending on each customer's billing period.

Here are some examples of monthly electric charges at the present and new rates:

- ☐ Small apartment suite without either electric space heating or electric water heating: monthly consumption, 150 kwh — present monthly cost, $4.50; cost at new rates, $5.40, an increase of 90¢.
- ☐ House with electric water heating, but without electric space heating: monthly consumption, 1000 kwh — present monthly cost, $16.70; cost at new rates, $19.90, an increase of $3.20.
- ☐ House with both electric space heating and electric water heating: monthly consumption, 3,000 kwh — present monthly cost, $38.70; cost at new rates, $45.90, an increase of $7.20.

The increase in residential electric rates will be the first since 1970. When you compare the increase in the cost of electricity with the price increases affecting virtually every commodity and service in recent years, the relative stability of electric rates is apparent.

275 Acres Worth $2M: Nanaimo Man's Gift

A gift of 275 acres of near-wilderness area adjoining the old army camp at Nanaimo has been made to the B.C. Land Commission which will designate it a wildlife sanctuary.

Agriculture Minister David Stupich said the land will be turned over to Malaspina College, next door, and will be called Morrell Wildlife Sanctuary after donor William A. Morrell, Dogwood Road, Nanaimo.

Stupich said the land is nearly in its natural state, having had only some logging of old growth timber.

Morrell was granted permission to remain on the land and has offered to be resident caretaker without pay.

A seven-member board will advise the land commission and college on use of the lands and the effects of policies, plans or projects undertaken either by the commission or the college. They will be known as Morrell Wildlife Sanctuary Foundation, and will be drawn from the college, the land commission and local representatives of the department of recreation and conservation and department of lands, forests and water resources.

Remarking on the size of the gift, Stupich said "one can only guess what the value of the land would be if it were subdivided and placed on the open market. Instead of capitalizing on this property, Bill has decided to donate it, absolutely free, to the people of British Columbia via the land commission with the only reservation being that it be dedicated to the protection and study of wildlife.

"On behalf of the people, and if I am capable of speaking for the wildlife that dwells therein, I wish to thank Bill for his most generous gift," Stupich said.

A conservative estimate of the land's worth, based on current real estate values of between $5,000 and $10,000 an acre of unimproved land, is $2 million.

Directors Eye Raise

Capital Regional District directors took the first step Wednesday towards voting themselves a raise.

First two readings were given to a bylaw which will come before the board again at its next meeting in August.

It is proposed to increase chairman Jim Campbell's remuneration to $6,000 a year from $4,000. Hospital board chairman Art Young would get $3,000, an increase of $1,000.

Directors from the electoral areas — View Royal, Langford, Colwood, Metchosin, Sooke, Salt Spring Island and Outer Gulf Islands — would get $3,000 a year and municipal directors would get $2,000.

Campbell explained the difference is because the responsibilities of non-municipal directors are greater "in terms of time."

Electoral area directors now receive $25 a meeting with an additional $25 for up to two further meetings a month which Campbell said would produce a maximum of $1,300 a year.

Municipal directors, paid $5 a meeting, would have earned "under $700" last year.

If the bylaw is approved, Campbell said, there would be no more meal allowances or car mileage.

URBAN PARK PROGRAM

The Capital Regional District moved Wednesday towards an urban park purchase program.

To date, the park purchases by the regional district have been in suburban or outlying areas of southern Vancouver Island.

The board approved a resolution to work with individual municipalities to develop "a more specific and detailed proposal for urban park acquisition."

It will also seek an amendment to its powers to introduce a special levy to be used solely for urban park purchase, starting with one-sixth of a mill in 1976 rising to a maximum of one-third mill as the need for revenues rises.

Cost of developing and operating urban parks would be provided from the existing half-mill levy as part of the over-all development and operating program for existing regional parks.

The board now will seek provincial approval to extend its powers to add urban parks and also to increase the maximum sum the district can borrow to $5 million from $2.5 million.

Alcan

Alcan Aluminium Ltd. reports consolidated net income for the second quarter of 1974 of $51.5 million U.S. of $1.50 a common share, a sharp increase over the $21.1 million or 62 cents a share recorded in the comparable period last year.

Net earnings for the six months to June 30 were $90.4 million or $2.63 a share, compared with $38.3 million or $1.12 a share in the first half of 1973, a financial statement issued Tuesday said.

Sales of aluminum in all forms rose slightly to 452,300 tons in the second quarter and 879.100 tons in the first half of 1974 compared with 440,500 tons and 860,800 tons in the corresponding periods last year.

Bethlehem

Bethlehem Copper Corp. has reported net income for the six months ended June 30 of $6,030,323, or 93.7 cents a share.

This compares with $5,915,606 or 92.2 cents a share for the corresponding period in 1973.

The mining company's financial statement showed that income before royalties and taxes was $18,481,544 compared with $10,497,033 in the six-month period in 1973. However, the company said, over 98 per cent of the increase was needed to cover new mineral royalties in B.C. and provide for federal and provincial taxes.

Total provision for royalties and taxes in the first six months of this year was $12,451,221, compared with $4,581,427 in the same period last year.

Finning Tractor

Finning Tractor and Equipment CVO. Ltd. recorded revenue of $77,865.000 in the first six months of 1974 compared to $75,255,000 for the same period last year.

Net income increased to $3,560,000 from $2,988,000 and earnings per share were 90 cents compared to 76 cents.

Board Chairman W. Maurice Young announced the mid-year figures following a board meeting at Terrace, B.C., July 19-20. The meeting was held coincident with completion of a $500,000 expansion project for the company's facilities in that city.

Celanese

Celanese Canada Ltd. reports net earnings for the second quarter of 1974 of $3,957,000 or 28 cents a share, compared with a restated $1,839,000 or 13 cents a share for the second quarter of 1973.

Net income for the six months to June 30 was $7,497,000 or 52 cents a share against $3,200,000 or 22 cents a share in the same period last year, a semi-annual statement said.

The statement said second quarter earnings were reduced by new inventory accounting methods which added $1.2 million to the cost of goods sold. Results were also adversely affected by strikes at three plants, it said.

Denison Mines

Denison Mines Ltd. of Toronto, reported Tuesday a 59.3-per-cent increase in consolidated net earnings for the six-month period ending June 30 compared to the same period last year.

Net earnings were $6,252,000 or $1.37 a share compared with $3,942,000 or 86 cents a share in 1973.

Denison says higher uranium earnings, higher revenue from oil and gas operations, record earnings from Lake Ontario Cement Ltd. in which it has a 54-per-cent interest, and increased investment revenue, all contributed to the improved earnings.

It says a strong demand for uranium on world markets has accelerated plans to increase production at the Denison mine at Elliot Lake beyond the initial expansion stage already under construction and scheduled to begin operation in mid-1975.

Exchange Firms Seek Surcharge

TORONTO (CP) — A brief to the Ontario Securities Commission by the Toronto Stock Exchange says member firms have been losing money since April at an expected annual rate of more than $60 million.

The exchange brief, based on a survey of its 91 member firms, is in support of an application to allow a temporary surcharge of 17.5 per cent to be added to stockbroker commissions for transactions of more than $39,720. The commission has scheduled a public hearing on the application for Aug. 7.

The loss rate is based on figures for the three months ended June 30 when member firms "lost capital in the amount of $15,460,000," the exchange said.

The loss represents 7.2 per cent of the capital of the industry. Current figures show no sign of improvement in the second fiscal quarter which began this month, an exchange spokesman said.

The surcharge approved by members Monday, does not apply on orders of $20,000 or less. Between $20,000 and $39,720 the surcharge varies from zero to 17.5 per cent. On orders of more than $39,720 the surcharge is a flat 17.5 per cent.

The exchange says that more than 95 per cent of stock transactions would not be affected. The brief says that of the 91 members, only 30 made a profit for the April 1 to June 30 period.

"The Chief Examiner of the exchange advises that for the last 12 years at least, there has not been a period when such a large percentage of firms have reported being in a loss position."

The brief says that if the current investment situation continues, "it will be impossible to raise the capital required for Canada's development.

Timber Stockpiles Build in Alaska

KETCHIKAN, ALASKA (AP) — Huge stockpiles of timber are building up at mills throughout southeast Alaska, where industry officials had predicted a complete shutdown by 1976 due to short supplies.

One industry spokesman blamed the backlog of timber on soaring interest rates on housing loans which have cutback on housing construction in the United States and Japan.

In Wrangell, two lumber mills operated by Alaska Pulp Co. Ltd. have reduced their work force until the end of the month to two eight-hours shifts four days a week. The mills normally operate five days.

In addition, Lance Ingle, manager of the Wrangell Lumber Co., said the mills would be closed for three weeks during August for maintenance repair. The repair work usually takes one week, Ingle said, but the longer period was prompted in part by the falling market.

Ingle could not estimate the mills' inventories, but he said stockpiles "are large and they are going to get larger." The companies hope to return to a five-day week in September.

A forest service official in Juneau attributed some of the backlog to a relatively mild winter that allowed cutting to begin earlier than usual.

The forest service came under fire last year from the Alaska Lumberman's Association for failing to make what the group saw as large enough independent timber sales to keep mills operating.

A spokesman for Ketchikan Spruce Mills, where an inventory of 8 million board feet is normally on hand, said he was expecting an additional 5 million to 6 million board feet, A mill in Metlakatla, which cuts 75 million board feet annually, was predicting a stockpile of 20 milllion board feet double its usual inventory.

Cattle Plan Prevented

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec Securities Commission has upheld a decision which prevents Farmex Enterprises Inc. from selling investments in cattle-breeding.

The company was forced to submit a securities prospectus after the commission ruled last February that the contract it sells is an investment contract.

Under the Farmex scheme, investors bought a cow and rights to offspring after the cow was bred with more valuable types of cattle.

The company's prespectus was refused in June by a commission filing officer. The latest ruling of the full commission was made July 18 on appeal from the June decision.

Als Don't Mind 'Ordinary Superstar'

MONTREAL (CP) — Defence wins championships, says coach Marv Levy of Montreal Alouettes, but it doesn't hurt to have one or two "ordinary" superstars.

"Our defence played a super game," Levy told reporters following the Alouettes' 20-12 victory over Hamilton Tiger-Cats in the opening game of the Eastern Football Conference Wednesday night.

But the game also showed that second-year quarterback Jimmy Jones is a team leader, he said.

The former University of Southern California star teamed with "ordinary" superstar Johnny Rodgers on an electrifying first-quarter 70-yard touchdown, one of five passes caught by Rodgers for a total of 128 yards.

"Our execution on defence forced them into errors," Levy said of Montreal's two pass interceptions, two recovered fumbles and its ability to limit Hamilton to four field goals, one in each quarter.

Hamilton place-kicker Ian Sunter scored his three-pointers from distances of 22, 38, 24 and 27 yards.

Jones had one pass intercepted and Montreal fullback Steve Ferrughelli, who had never fumbled during his professional career prior to the game, lost two against the Ticats.

Jones also tossed a 16-yard touchdown to halfback Larry Smith in the second quarter. Kicker Don Sweet converted both first-half touchdowns and added field goals in the second and third quarters from 34 and 14 yards respectively.

Rodger's spectacular touchdown brought many of the 15,246 spectators to their feet when he caught the ball at the Hamilton 20-yard line between defenders Al Brenner and Louis Clare and outraced them 20 yards to the end zone, running backwards the last five yards.

Hamilton coach Jerry Williams told reporters he put back-up quarterback Bill Etter into the game in the third quarter because the team was not moving under Chuck Ealey. Ealey returned late in the game after Etter began suffering double vision following a hit by defensive end Junior Ah You, who was voted the game ball by his Alouette team-mates.

"Don't write us off yet," Williams said.

"We moved the ball pretty well," he said of the Ticats who were outrushed by the Als 159-58, but gained 269 yards through the air compared with 182 for Montreal.

Shamrocks Bow Again

By MAX LOW
Tie Stamf

Hope is slipping away fast for the Victoria Shamrocks.

It's been a bad week for them. Within a few days, officials have warned the club may fold unless someone takes it over and runs it in a pro league, and Rocks have twice been confronted with another bitter truth — they can't beat the club they must get past to make it into the Western Lacrosse Association playoffs.

Shamrocks, minus half a dozen key players who were snapped up by the eastern pro league, have been struggling this season and club president Chris Randall told a news conference Tuesday that, if the Rocks continued to lose players, they would be unable to carry on.

Before this woeful week began, the Rocks were tied for third place with Coquitlam Adanacs in the race for one of the three playoff berths in the four-team league. Two games later, they're four points behind with chances they'll reach the playoffs fading rapidly.

After losing 16-14 in Coquitlam Monday, the Shamrocks desperately wanted to make amends before a home crowd of 1,310 fans at Memorial Arena Wednesday night. But they failed to master the power-play situation and, despite a late-game comeback effort, couldn't quite get over a bad second-period slump. This time, they lost 14-10 to the Adanacs but, really it was just a continuation of a season-long trend. The clubs have met six times and Victoria has won only once.

The game began at a fantastic pace, with Jim Rickbeil scoring the first of four goals for Coquitlam after only four seconds.

The Rocks bounced straight back, though, and equalized when Ron MacNeil got the first of his three at the 21-second mark.

Ivan Thompson, making a return to the lineup after being out with flu, scored at 19:43 to give the Rocks a 6-5 edge going into the second period, but that was the last time they were ahead.

With Rickbeil, John Allen and league-leading scorer Dave Durante doing most of the damage, Adanacs scored five straight goals and shut the Shamrocks out for the whole of the second period to lead 10-6.

Victoria lacking in fire, squandered many chances in the second period.

The Shamrocks failed to make use of the power ply again in the third period. They couldn't score when Coquitlam was a man short on several occasions as officials got tough to keep the potentially-explosive game in hand.

The Rocks did pull to within two goals when burly Dave Thomson scored their second straight goal of the period to make it 10-8. But Durante soon got a power-play goal from there it was all downhill for Victoria.

The Rocks—Is There Really Any Choice?

The Shamrocks are dead, or very nearly so, a victim of the scourge of the age — instant professionalism.

No longer can a senior "A" lacrosse team operate successfully in the city. It's simply turn professional or turn belly up. The most economical is the latter; the most likely — who knows?

To put it bluntly, the entire Western Lacrosse Association is faced with the very same problem. The teams can't continue to lose players and graduating juniors to the National Lacrosse League, and continue to survive.

And the relatively simple manoeuvre of declaring the WLA professional, or turning some of the clubs pro, and offering handsome salaries to the star players, most of whom are playing for nothing except their love of the game at present, isn't the answer either. It's only a cheap form of window dressing.

What is feasible, however is a west coast professional lacrosse league, not an offshoot of the National Lacrosse League, but a completely separate entity. Toss in names like Seattle . . . Portland . . . Los Angeles . . . Calgary . . . Edmonton . . . Vancouver . . . and you soon get the idea . . . Add a couple of luminaries such as Bill Russell in Seattle and Wilt Chamberlain in L.A. as the high-priced front men, and things start to take shape.

And oh, yes, Victoria too. But only for a season or two, because with only a 5,200-seat arena, who's going to pay for all that bread that finally will be needed?

That's the gist of the message that president Chris Randall of the Shamrocks threw out for conjecture at a press party this week, along with the warning: There is just no way senior "A" lacrosse, as it is known today, can operate as a viable product any more.

At Least the Price Is Right

So, it's go pro, and if anyone is definitely interested, you can't beat the price. The tab for the Rocks is "absolutely nothing". After that, of course, a prospective buyer would have to learn to live with a budget approaching $400,000 a year, for about two years. Because that's when the sport here would outgrow a too small arena. A move to greener areas and bigger coliseums would be necessary, and presto: perhaps instant success as a sports impressario.

The thinking is that professional lacrosse next season is going to go the whole hog on a make-or-break basis in the U.S. east. Expansion is definite, even if some of the teams are dropping a bundle this year and will shift their franchises elsewhere. Money, it appears, is no object. So who can blame the players? Because who's going to stay home summers if they can stickhandle and score goals and get $12,000-$15,000 for doing it? Not many, and no eager youngster with any ability or initiative.

The Rocks and other WLA clubs lost about 30 players to the pros this year, and the tally will go up next year unless a solution is found. And that alone might be the death-knell of the WLA.

This is not to say the WLA isn't aware of the problem. It is, and already a fact-finding mission is being carried out in the east by commissioner Colin Cruikshank. He wants answers to several questions, such as: How serious is the NLL? How much money are the NLL teams prepared to lose to get established, or die in the attempt? What payments will the WLA get for players already pilfered? How strong a voice does the Canadian Lacrosse Association have? Et cetera.

He will then report back to the WLA on his findings.

Go South, Young Man, Go South

But right now, the bidding has been declared open for the Rocks; and the Irish, in return, have promised to assist anyone in every way in getting started. Sure, it will be virtually the same product that was marketed here in the past. But that's the fashion, and also one very good reason for the go-south approach. Who's to know, in Seattle or L.A. for instance, whether Joe Schultz is really one of Canada's greatest players or not? And who's to care, as long as he sells what he is there to sell, and the public buys it?

That's where the market is, not here. We've had it so good on the west coast for so long we don't appreciate it any more, as anyone can tell by the attendance figures.

Still, if someone would like to try, here it is, a gift opportunity, and a ready-made team that otherwise "will lose about five players to the NLL" if action isn't taken soon. Forecast of the impending exodus was made by goalkeeper Skip Chapman, who is closer to the pulse of the Rocks than most. Doubtless more will follow on the mainland.

Besides, there's no guarantee that even with pros here as a top draw, a club won't run into that old bugbear—too many people turning up disguised as empty seats. It has happened before, too many times.

So from here it's a simple choice, to be delayed only until Cruikshank returns. He may have an alternative. Or an angel. He will need both. Or it could be that all the worry is simply folly. Jumping to conclusions is also a common malady.

David Saville Peck in his Costello SP8 Can-Am racing car

Auto Racing Glamor Vanishes When You Run Into a Moose

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

Mention the glamor of big-time auto racing to David Saville Peck and the English-born resident of Victoria just smiles.

"You might think it's glamorous," he said Wednesday during a stopover between races in the Canadian-American Challenge Cup series, "but it's really a hand-to-mouth existence.

"We're unsponsored," he explained. "We've won only $5,000 this year and it costs $1,000 a week to pay wages, food and gas bills, and that's not including the race car."

Peck heads the Ennerdale Racing team, which includes mechanic Paul Markgraf, assistant mechanic John Preston-Thomas of Ottawa and Paul's wife, Elena, who copes with the day-to-day living problems and counts the laps when Peck is racing.

The Ennerdale team operates out of Langford, where Peck and Markgraf service about 100 customers who own European-made sports cars. It was in the same shop last winter that they designed and built the Costello SP8, the Can-Am sports car they are campaigning in the six-race series across the continent this summer.

That means vanning the car to races at Mosport, Ont., Atlanta, Watkins Glen, N.Y., Lexington, Ohio, Elkhart Lake, Wisc., Edmonton and Riverside, Calif., and living out of a trailer.

It also means failing truck brakes on a hill and tangling with a moose in Northern Ontario at three o'clock in the morning.

"The glamor goes out of it when you hit a 1,500-pound moose, as we did last year at White River, north of Lake Superior," Peck related. "I'd never seen a moose before. I thought it was an elephant."

The animal wandered onto the highway and was instantly killed when hit by Peck's truck. There was $1,500 damage to the vehicle.

And there's nothing like a breakdown en route to your next race to make you appreciate the glamor of motorsport.

"On the way to Road Atlanta (where Peck finished eighth on July 7 for his best-ever Can-Am placing) we lost the brakes on the truck and trailer on a long, gentle grade."

Peck geared down but the truck just kept rolling at about 10 miles per hour.

"We couldn't stop for nearly a mile," he recalled. "If anything had got in our way, we couldn't have done a thing."

Peck, 29, has been driving competitively since he was 17 and expects to continue at least another 10 years. After that, he'd like to expand his Ennerdale Racing team to include several cars and drivers.

The currrent car, weighing 1,280 pounds and powered by a 400-horsepower Leyland-Ennerdale aluminum V8 engine built by Markgraf, can achieve a top speed of over 220 m.p.h. Peck designed it and it's the second car to come out of the Langford shop in the two years he has been in Victoria. This year's car would cost a buyer at least $40,000.

SAVILLE PECK
. . . sponsor would help

Eventually, Peck wants to market chassis and parts for other racing outfits and has several designs on the board. In the last three years, he has spent about $250,000 on racing. The sale of his car servicing business in Canterbury, England, two years ago got him started.

A sponsor would relieve most of the financial problems but Peck hasn't been able to find a suitable one. He may have one for next season, however, if all goes well in talks with a Canadian firm today in Vancouver.

If he can land a sponsor, he plans to drive in the International Manufacturers' Championship in November in South Africa and compete in a six-race road-circuit series during the winter in Australia.

Meanwhile, he'll pilot the Costello SP8 — named for former racing partner Brian Costello, a London stockbroker — in the Mid-Ohio at Lexington Aug. 11.

Provided, of course, he doesn't run into a moose on the way.

Unitas Calls It A Day

By The Associated Press

Johnny Unitas is headed for the pro football Hall of Fame — but there's a growing chance St. Louis Cardinals and Buffalo Bills may not see the Canton, Ohio, shrine this year.

The National Football League players' strike, which earlier this month kayoed Friday night's college all-star game, is going after Saturday's Hall of Fame game between the Cards and Bills as its next target.

And the players received support Wednesday when spokesmen for the United Auto workers union said they would join players picketing the game.

Unitas, acclaimed one of the greatest quarterbacks in the history of pro football, retired Wednesday after 18 years in the NFL. the strike had nothing to do with it. two weeks ago, Unitas was the lone San Diego veteran to cross the players' picket line and enter the Chargers' camp for workouts.

Unitas, who passed for more touchdowns and more yards than any other player in the league, explained: "I didn't feel my legs were capable of taking the punishment they would have had to take . . . I hate to quit playing football. The mind is willing but your body wears out."

Sydney Adds B.C. Crown To Parade of Successes

SQUAMISH — There's more to come, but 1974 already has proven to be a good year for Victoria's Sydney Thompson.

The 15-year-old Colwood miss won the British Columbia junior women's championship Wednesday to go along with earlier victories in the Victoria City and Pacific Northwest Golf Association junior title tests.

With Wednesday's victory, Miss Thomson was named to head the three-women B.C. junior team which will compete in the Canadian junior and interprovincial team matches at Edmonton Aug. 14.

In addition, Sydney also will compete in the Junior World Championships at San Diego July 31-Aug. 2.

Sydney scored a seven-over-par 83 Wednesday to go with an opening 86 for a 36-hole total of 169.

First-round leader Paula Phillips of Vancouver was apparently second, 85-86—171, but was disqualified for inadvertantly signing an incorrect card. She still had enough points, however, to be named to the provincial team with Sydney and Jill Badger of Vancouver.

Miss Badger and Patty Murray of Vernon both scored 86s to tie for the next spot with 176 totals. The Vernon junior won hunner-up honors on a countback.

Laura Iwaski of Kamloops posted Wednesday's best round, an 82, and wound up with a 177 total.

Other Island scores included: Shelley Hagg of Chemainus, 92-88—180; Heather Stewart of Cedar Hill, 95-87—182; Tracy Pierpoint of Uplands, 90-93—183; Kathy Little of Gorge Vale, 96-97—193; Mary McKinnon of Uplands, 98-97—195; Laurie Valleau of Chemainus, 100-101—201; and Jean McKinnon of Uplands, 107-107—214.

The Gals Could Add Glamor To Satellite Tourney Here

THE TENNIS SCENE

By Max Low

Women, as Billie Jean King has been insisting for many years, are a vital part of any tennis tournament.

They add color, often glamor and sometimes they provide tennis as exciting as the men in their singles and doubles finals.

This could well be the case in the 77th B.C. Open, which is being played at the Racquet Club of Victoria Aug. 5-10. Top-flight players from the United States, appearing with the men on the seven stops on the western satellite circuit, promise to make this year's women's singles and doubles events probably the best ever.

The women aren't actually on the satellite tour. They don't receive any purse at the end and they aren't trying for points that could lead to berths in the U.S. Open at Forest Hills.

But in most centres, local sponsors have put up prize money and so far the competition has been fierce and the tennis entertaining.

Co-sponsors with the Wilson sporting goods firm, BMW dealers Georgia Pacific Motors, have offered $400 in prize money for the women's singles and an additional $150 for the doubles in the Victoria tournament.

Top women players so far along the tour stops have been Robin Kahn of Los Alamitos, Calif., who won the singles title in Eugene and was runner-up to former U.S ranked player Sally Moore of Los Angeles in Tacoma, and Claire Schmoyer. No. 1 player at Arizona State University who took the title at Portland. All three are expected to play here.

City champion Brenda Cameron of the Racquet Club is being invited to compete.

★ ★ ★

Rivalry is keen on the men's satellite circuit where Steve Messmer of Los Angeles, winner in Eugene and runner-up in Portland, still leads.

Stealing the spotlight in the latest tournament, last week's Pacific Northwest Open in Portland, was hard-hitting former Australian junior champion Keith Hancock. He sent over 15 aces and seven other unreturnable serves while beating Chip Fisher of Texas (B.C. Open champ here two years ago) 6-3, 6-4 in the final.

★ ★ ★

Rivalry is just as keen here, too, for the two Victoria berths in the 64-man main draw first round. A "mini-tourney" is being held this weekend with eight players competing in two groups of four in round-robin play.

Ted Davies, Marty Taylor and John Nichol of Oak Bay Tennis Club and Neil Coutts, a Victorian who is teaching pro at Comox Valley Tennis Club in Courtenay, make up one group. In the other group are Roger Skillings, of Victoria, Geoff Harris of Courtenay, Tony Simnett and either Steve Perks or Bob Hutton of Oak Bay. Winners of each four-man group go directly into the main draw and the others will get a chance to make it through the qualifying round to be played Sunday, Aug. 4.

The idea behind the mini tourney is fair enough, but I can't help feeling officials have erred in not giving Davies, the current city champ, one of the berths and letting the others fight it out for the remaining spot.

★ ★ ★

Extra seating for up to 500 fans is being put up around the Racquet Club's No. 8 and 9 courts. Tickets will go on sale at the club next week. It's $3 for an all-day ticket for the semi-final matches on Friday, Aug. 9, and $4 for Saturday's finals. With your ticket you get a 20-page program.

★ ★ ★

It was a shame they had to postpone the popular fourth annual Old Crocks' Tournament last weekend at the South Cowichan Lawn Tennis Club but, despite the glorious weekend weather, the courts were just too wet to make tournament play possible. The event has been rescheduled for Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 2, 3 and 4, and all Victoria players who had entered should phone the clubhouse (746-7282) and confirm they are able to play that weekend.

Victoria Archer In Third

PRINCE ALBERT (CP) — Six records were set in long-distance events Wednesday at the Canadian outdoor archery championships.

John Horvath of Taber, Alta., won the 180-metre battle clout with 134 of a possible 180 to surpass by far the Canadian record of 92 set last year by Stuart Baxter of Downsview, Ont.

Six shooters broke the Canadian record of 136 in the men's clout, a 165-metre event. The old record was set last year by Brian Walcovitch of Scarborough, Ont. The new one belongs to Al Cliff of British Columbia, first with 163 of a possible 180.

Marie Thompson of Lethbridge won the women's 125-metre clout with 131 of a possible 180, one more than Joan McDonald of Toronto. They were followed by Vi Muir of Victoria, with 129.

Marc St. Arnaud of Laval, Que., won the boys' clout with 163 of 180.

Quebec led the junior provincial challenge competitin with 6,028 aggregate. Ontario was second with 5,860 and B.C. third with 5,421.

Aztecs Cut Two

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles Aztecs of the North American Soccer League have cut veterans Reneto Costa, who has scored four goals this season and Rodriguez Vega, a Chilean midfielder.

Weiskopf, Nicklaus Defend Open Layout

TORONTO (CP) — Defending champion Tom Weiskopf and Jack Nicklaus took exception Wednesday to accusations that Mississaugua Golf Club is not in championship form.

Much of the 6,788-yard layout was under water in the spring when the Credit River flooded.

"I don't think a lot of you guys (writers) go beyond the 18th green," said Nicklaus before he and Weiskopf embarked on their second practice round for the Canadian Open, a 72-hole test for $200,000 in prize money that began today.

As for complaints of slow play in the initial two days of practice rounds, Weiskopf had this answer:

"Those guys that do all the complaining don't play at the right time of day. I play either very early in the day or very late."

The two Columbus, Ohio, natives paired both Tuesday and Wednesday for late starts and dusk was falling when they returned to the clubhouse.

They will be among a field of 150 professionals and amateurs trying for the $40,000 first prize.

The three amateurs in the field all earned exemptions from the Royal Canadian Golf Association — George Burns III of Port Washington, N.Y., the 1973 Canadian amateur champion; Ontario amateur Gary Cowan of Kitchener, Ont.; and veteran Nick Weslock of Burlington, Ont.

TOM WEISKOPF
. . . the right time

Weiskopf, who included the Kemper, Philadelphia and Colonial among his 1973 tour victories, has yet to win this year.

Of the course he said:

"I'd have to rank it in the top 10 on the tour this year so far as being beautiful and tough.

"I hear that floods have left spots and that the course has been damaged. Heck, I've played courses that didn't have any flood problems and they really did have damaged spots.

"I think this Mississaugua is in excellent condition."

Victoria Marksman Earns Place With Queen's 300

BISLEY, England (CP) — The top Canadian as the Queen's Prize competition at Bisley moves toward the semi-finals is Sgt. Joe Daigle of Shannon, Que., a triple Queen's Medal winner and leading service rifle shot who outpointed many of the top target riflemen.

Daigle, a member of the Canadian Forces team, is in the Royal 22nd and now on his fifth visit to Bisley.

He scored 101 out of a possible 105 with seven shots at 200, 500 and 600 yards Wednesday, the test used to reduce the original entry of 1,000 competitors to the 300 who will shoot in the semi-finals.

As anticipated, with many competitors making their first appearance, it was a low-scoring match this year.

The top score of 103 was made by an Australian and five Britons who now will reshoot for the first-stage bronze medal. Lowest qualifying score was 96, and at this level only 29 of the 108 who made that total got through. The remainder were "counted out" under the rules.

Four British Columbia shooters, including Joe Gibault of Victoria, who scored a 97, made it to the next round. Others were Derek Daines (99) of Vancouver, Cadet Grant McLoughlin of Maple Ridge (97) and Jack Cramer of Port Coquitlam (97).

In earlier competition, Canadian army cadets won four of the eight prizes in the Young Riflemen's Aggregate.

The Young Riflemen's Challenge Bowl, which goes to the competitor under 25 years making the best aggregate in the first series of short-range shoots of the meeting, was won by J. F. R. Ballantine of Uppingham, a British school. He scored 188 out of a possible 200 in four events to win by a two-point margin over Leroy Whitnack of Penticton, a member of the British Columbia Dragoons Cadet Corps, who took second prize.

The other prize winners — the best of 200 young marksmen who entered — included Michael Hibberd, Queen's York Rangers Cadet Corp of Toronto, fifth with 184; Steven Tweedle, Ottawa Communications Cadet Corps, sixth with 184, and Kenneth Drader, Lacombe, Alta., Cadet Corps, eighth with 181.

Team Canada Bypasses NHL

WINNIPEG (CP) — Coach Billy Harris said Wednesday that Team Canada '74 will be an exclusive World Hockey Association club that will stress sportsmanship during its eight-game series this fall against the Soviet union.

Harris, named coach of the year in the WHA last season while directing Toronto Toros, said there won't be many young players on the team "because I think it will take real mature men to play the Europeans."

The full Team Canada roster will be announced July 31 in Toronto, but Harris said there will be no National Hockey League players on the team.

"Dave Keon gave it a lot of serious thought, but he was the only one who did," Harris said.

Richmond Is In

LANGLEY (CP) — Richmond Roadrunners edged Langley J-Hawks 10-9 Wednesday night in Pacific junior "A" lacrosse action, assuring themselves of a playoff spot.

Langley's loss ended the last-place team's playoff chances.

Richmond was leading 7-2 midway through the second period when Langley came rushing back with six straight goals. But third-period goals by Ian Clearie, Tom Penway and Ray Durante kept Richmond on top.

CUBS PICK A NEW MANAGER

CHICAGO (AP) — Jim Marshall, the third-base coach, was named manager of Chicago Cubs Wednesday, replacing Whitey Lockman who said he will devote full time to the job of player development director.

Lockman, who replaced dismissed Leo Durocher in the middle of the 1972 season, said he had recommended Marshall as his replacement.

Marshall said his managerial contract runs for th rest of the season only.

King Named But Aaron in Wings

ATLANTA (AP) — Clyde King was named Wednesday to manage the faltering Atlanta Braves, but Henry Aaron's revelation that he would have taken the job if asked turned a routine announcement into a simmering controversy.

Aaron, the 40-year-old all-time baseball home run king who had said he never wanted to manage, changed his stand Tuesday night at the all-star game in Pittsburgh.

"If the Braves offered me the job Wednesday," said Aaron, "I'd feel compelled to take it simply because there are no black managers in the major leagues.

"I have said previously that I wasn't interested in managing the Braves or any other team. But since my name was injected into the conversation by Atlanta vice-president Eddie Robinson, I've changed my mind."

Robinson, who expressed surprise at Aaron's statement, said:

"In all of our talks with Hank, he has said that he wanted a front office job after he retired and not a position on the field. I don't think there's anything to straighten out. I'll talk to Henry about it."

Meanwhile, King, a special assistant to Robinson for the last two years and a former manager with San Francisco Giants, was named interim manager. He had been the leading candidate since Eddie Mathews was fired Sunday.

Robinson, who stressed that King was taking over only for the remainder of the year, said King possibly would be rehired for next year if the Braves showed improvement.

He also left the door open for Aaron, saying that if a change in managers had to be made next year, "Aaron would be considered."

Victoria Cosmos Ousted

PRINCE GEORGE — North Vancouver came out on top of a pitcher's duel to eliminate Victoria Gordon Head Cosmopolitans 1-0 in the 14 and 15-year-old B.C. Babe Ruth baseball championship tournament here Wednesday.

The victory gives North Vancouver another chance at unbeaten Trail in today's final. Trail dropped North Van into the losers' bracket with a 4-1 decision Tuesday.

Gary White of Cosmos threw a two-hitter and struck out 12 batters while absorbing the loss. He pitched no-hit ball until the fifth inning when he walked one batter and allowed a single which put runners on first and third. A pitch that got away from the catcher allowed the winning run.

Cosmos had runners reach third base twice earlier in the game and appeared to rally in the seventh inning when Mark Lum connected for a two-out single and stole second.

But the next batter grounded out to end the game and give Barry Penman, who struck out 10 and issued three bases on balls, a three-hit triumph.

MARK II

The Toyota even a big car owner will love.

MARK II HARDTOP

MARK II FOUR DOOR

MARK II WAGON

Putting down big cars is really popular these days.

Even big car owners are getting it in the neck.

But there are plenty of people left in this world who need a big car, love a big car and who are quite willing to pay for a big car. Up to a point.

That point arrives when they start paying more money... and getting less car. And when the cost of operating a big car simply zooms out of sight. As it is doing today.

The big car love affair is wearing thin.

Happily ever after, there's a beautiful alternative that isn't a compromise: the Toyota Mark II.

THE MOST TOYOTA YET. Think of the Mark II as being even more Toyota for your money.

It has more room, more power and more luxury features than any other Toyota we make. And we make 22 different models.

This one is an original, from top to bottom. And, as standard equipment, it offers a few surprising features you may not find on bigger cars with bigger price tags.

PERFORMANCE PLUS. The Mark II has a six cylinder, 2600 cc overhead cam engine. It delivers a nifty 122 net horsepower at 5200 rpm. And that's a lot of horsepower for an economy car.

It means effortless cruising at highway speeds, passing power when you need it and a satisfying quickness off the mark from a standing start.

But, because the Mark II is also a Toyota, it also means a pleasantly long interval between gas stations.

YOU DRIVE IT. IT DOESN'T DRIVE YOU. Be honest, now. Aren't some big cars sort of "mushy" to handle? Not the Mark II. It's a small car with big ideas on handling. The standard power steering is firm but light. You can take tight corners without swaying or losing that secure sense of stability. Power assisted front disc brakes ease you to a fade-free stop. And a standard 4-speed synchromesh transmission changes smoothly as it gives you a nice feeling of control.

QUIET LUXURY: INSIDE AND OUT. The fact that the Mark II is an economy car is a fact you can keep to yourself.

The attractive padded dash, the electric clock, the AM/FM radio and the classic shift console all speak quietly of luxury.

And there's more. Brocaded vinyl trim colour-keyed to Mark II's plush nylon carpeting. Fully reclining bucket seats. Radial ply whitewall tires on sedans and hardtops. Tinted glass all around. And comfort for the whole family.

OUR EXTRAS DON'T COST EXTRA. Everything we've mentioned so far is (are you ready for this?) standard equipment. Plus unit body construction, independent front suspension, collapsible steering column, heavy duty starter, electric rear window defroster, lined trunk. Even a tool kit.

AN EMBARRASSING COMPARISON. Many car manufacturers offer the small car buyer a long list of attractive options.

Tempting, but also expensive.

By comparison, our list is rather modest. It is one option long: automatic transmission.

It's enough to make a salesman blush.

STEP UP TO A SMALLER CAR. When lovers of big cars think of small cars they think in terms of stepping down.

Well, the Toyota Mark II has changed all that. In many ways, this small car is a step up. In quality, in comfort and, yes, even in luxury.

Maybe only a small car manufacturer with over 40 years of experience could have brought it off.

But this much we know.

The Mark II is a car that can make you fall in love with driving all over again.

And that's not thinking small.

Tanker Failures In Sound Cited

SEATTLE (AP) — The state ecology department says at least two oil tankers have had mechanical breakdowns near Rosario Strait in Puget Sound within the past two years.

A department source said Wednesday the Hillyer Brown, a Chevron Shipping Co., tanker carrying only ballast, lost power near the east end of Rosario Strait and drifted until a tugboat arrived on the scene.

A company spokesman confirmed the incident, which occurred a few months before the Hillyer Brown ran aground and spilled 196,000 gallons of oil into the water near Cold Bay, Alaska. The coast guard said that spill didn't involve mechanical failure however.

The near accident on Puget Sound was revealed one day after a veteran Puget Sound pilot told of an incident in which a tanker carrying more than 10 million gallons of crude oil almost hit a reef near the entrance to Rosario Strait, about 75 miles north of Seattle. The tanker was not identified.

The revelations came as the coast guard wound up hearings in Seattle on proposed tanker regulations for Puget Sound.

Emery Joyce, president of the Puget Sound Pilots, was joined by representatives of environmental groups and politicians in urging the coast guard to require double hulls on tankers brining oil into the sound.

Such a requirement had been part of the proposed regulations but was dropped after other nations refused to join the U.S. in a proposal to require double bottoms on tankers engaged in international trade. The coast guard said complications might result from having different sets of rules for tankers engaged in domestic traffic.

NEW LEGISLATURE FOR SCOTLAND

LONDON (Reuter) — The national executive committee of Britain's governing Labor party voted unanimously Wednesday for creation of an elected legislative assembly for Scotland.

However, the resolution stressed that the assembly should remain "within the context of the political and economic unity of the United Kingdom."

The vote by the party's top policy-making body came in response to increasing calls for independence within Scotland, as reflected by a sharp increase in the representation in Parliament of the independence minded Scottish National Party.

There now are seven Scottish Nationalists MPs in Westminster, compared with two previously.

Hijacker Dies In Second Try

CALI, Colombia (UPI) — Eduardo Martinez hijacked a Colombian jetliner to Havana six years ago. He wanted to study medicine, but Cuba sent him out to cut sugar cane instead.

The 34-year-old, self-styled revolutionary hijacked another Colombian airliner Wednesday and demanded $2 million in ransom. He ended up dying.

Colombian policemen disguised as flight mechanics shot the bearded, two-time air pirate aboard an Avianca jetliner that he had hijacked with 129 persons aboard.

Police said Martinez, accompanied by his girlfriend, Mercedes Forero, and their one-year-old baby, boarded the Boeing 727 jet on a domestic flight between the cities of Pereira and Medellin.

Authorities said he pulled out a revolver and ordered the plane to land at Cali, the principal airport in western Colombia. He then demanded $2 million in ransom and free passage to Cuba for a group of Colombian political prisoners.

The hijack came two days after Colombia and Cuba signed an agreement designed to prevent the seizure of each other's planes and ships.

Hospital spokesmen said Martinez died on the operating table at a Cali hospital after being shot three times, one in the head and twice in the abdomen.

He held the plane on a runway at Cali's Palmaseca airport for 90 minutes before being overpowered. Minutes before the policemen came aboard, all 123 passengers escaped through emergency exits.

The hijacker's brother, radio announcer Neftali Martinez, said the slain air pirate was suffering from a mental disorder and "had an obsession to hijack another plane."

Martinez pirated an Avianca plane to Cuba in May, 1968. He wanted to study medicine on the communist island, but Cuban authorities forced him to cut sugar cane for six months.

The disgruntled revolutionary then left Cuba for Spain, stopping in Panama and Ecuador before sneaking back into Colombia.

Pharmacists Form National Group

MONTREAL (CP) — Representatives of pharmacists from all provinces except Saskatchewan and Newfoundland formed an association Wednesday to deal with pharmaceutical questions on a national scale.

Stewart Wilcox of Manitoba, founding president of the Canadian Federation of Community Pharmacists, told a news conference the association also will be a forum for discussion among most of the country's 9,000 pharmacists.

Yves Comtois, association vice-president, said representatives to the founding convention agreed pharmacists should not get excessive profits.

"We don't want to make profits on products we sell to consumers. We only want to get paid for services we render to consumers and the general public."

Comtois said the federation opposes the abusive use of drugs, adding that the only solution is to end excessive advertising of drugs.

Community pharmacists are those who work in or own drugstores dealing with the general public, Comtois said.

Pharmacists working for the government or for private firms will be excluded from membership, he said.

New Anusol Plus promises quick relief from hemorrhoid symptoms, starting with the pain.

New Anusol Plus does first things first.

Since the pain of hemorrhoids can be unbearable, new Anusol Plus contains a topical anaesthetic. This relieves even intense hemorrhoid pain almost as soon as you apply it. It cools that burning, searing sensation. And numbs that maddening itch. And while it does all this within minutes, the relief that it gives will last for hours.

And new Anusol Plus looks after your other symptoms too.

Since twisted hemorrhoid veins often swell and become tender, new Anusol Plus helps to reduce this swelling with a gentle decongestant ingredient. To soothe and protect tender hemorrhoid tissues, it contains a smooth, rich emollient. And it has two antiseptic agents that curb infection—thus helping your hemorrhoids to heal.

In addition, new Anusol Plus now comes in a silky smooth cream form. This means that it goes on easily. Even in areas where the skin is sore and inflamed.

New Anusol Plus, in cream or suppository form, is now on sale at your nearest pharmacy. It'll give you quick relief from your painful hemorrhoid symptoms. And that's a promise.

Pt. Roberts' Future Studied

POINT ROBERTS, Wash. (AP) — Washington legislators gather here today to begin a round of hearings on the future of the tiny peninsula which sparked an international "water war" last summer.

The select committee, chaired by Democratic Senator A. L. Rasmussen, of Tacoma, will hold its first session at the Breakers at 1:30 p.m., followed by a public hearing at Western Washington State College in Bellingham at 7:30 p.m. A third hearing is planned for 11 a.m. Friday at the high school at Friday Harbor.

"Probably the biggest problem is the low water supply," Rasmussen said. "But there are others — health insurance, private development, transportation of goods, free movement of tradesmen, power supply, law enforcement, education, and sewage disposal."

Point Roberts, a small Washington peninsula dangling into the Strait of Gerogia from the British Columbia mainland, is accessible only through British Columbia When British Columbia refused to supply the Point with water last summer, it had to be trucked in from Blaine, 23 miles away in Whatcom County.

An uneasy settlement was reached several weeks later.

The second major issue keeping controversy swirling is a plan to make Point Roberts the headquarters territory for a huge international park including the San Juan archipelago.

Many residents of the Point have voiced opposition to the plan offered by the International Joint Commission, claiming their opinions were not adequately sought.

The special committee was created by the legislature earlier this year and the IJC has agreed to delay any decision on the park plan until this winter, Rasmussen said.

The committee is to compile information on the entire Point Roberts picture and forward recommendations to the full legislature.

'KILLER DRUG' IN PORTLAND

PORTLAND ORE. (AP) — An unidentified substance being peddled as high grade heroin apparently killed a fourth young man here Wednesday.

Dr. William Brady, State Medical Examiner, said the death of Gary James Thompson, 18, was being treated as "an apparent drug death" pending the results of an autopsy scheduled today.

Police said a young woman described as Thompson's girl friend was being treated for drug symptoms at Portland's Bess Kaiser hospital.

"Until the autopsy, we have nothing concrete to link the Thompson death with the others," Brady said Wednesday night. "But the connection is apparent. We know this material is on the streets. We've had three deaths in the past week. Drug deaths are just not that common in Portland."

Police said the material Brady referred to was being sold as China White, a street term for a high grade of heroin.

In fact, say medical authorities, it is an amphetamine-like substance whose identity is being sought by poison experts at the University of Oregon medical school.

Police sources said as many as 10 detectives of the special investigations division were running down the source of the substance.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A Courtenay man was found guilty in Victoria provincial court Wednesday of escaping lawful custody April 13 because he ran from a motorcycle policeman.

Const. John Smith told provincial court Judge William Ostler he arrested Gary William Beirne for impaired driving on Blanshard.

After getting out of his car and speaking to the officer, Beirne said he wanted to speak to his wife.

He then ran from the car.

The constable pursued Beirne for about 25 feet but gave up because his ability to run was impeded by his motorcycle helmet and boots.

Beirne, answering questions by his lawyer, denied he had been arrested.

He ran, he said, because he was scared.

Ostler remanded the case to Aug. 15 for a pre-sentence report and sentencing.

Police Jump Hearst Look-Alike

TORONTO (CP) — Armed police in Oregon surrounded three Canadian travellers when one of them was mistaken for newspaper heiress Patricia Heart, Alice Borisko, mother of the girl, said Wednesday.

She said her daughter Susan, 20 was reported to police as having a likeness to the kidnapped heiress when she stopped at a roadside restaurant with two friends.

Mrs. Borisko said that on leaving the restaurant their Volkswagen was forced off the road by a police cruiser and surrounded by police who ordered all occupants out with their hands up or they would shoot.

"They were all shook-up when it happened. They were terrified they were going to be shot but were released by police once their identification had been checked."

She said she learned of the incident when her daughter telephoned from San Francisco.

Hearst Hoax Sparks Raid

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A woman telephoned police and gave them false information which they said led them to believe she might have been fugutive heiress Patricia Hearst. She said she wanted to surrender. The hoax touched off some frantic activity Wednesday night.

—More than 100 police surrounded an apartment building, blocked off streets and negotiated by telephone with the hoaxer, who said she wanted to surrender to "Uncle George."

—A police spokesman said police raided an apartment but found only a cat, a .22-calibre rifle and an automatic shotgun. Three persons who were in the apartment, including a 13-year-old girl who bears a strong resemblance to Hearst, said they were grabbed by detectives and questioned.

Police said the guns had a legitimate owner with no connection to the Symbionese Liberation Army (SLA), which kidnapped Hearst at Berkeley, Calif., Feb. 4.

The hoaxter wasn't found, and a police spokesman said later "we had no evidence that Hearst or any SLA member was ever there."

Three persons called police between 6 and 6:30 p.m. and said a woman fitting the description of Hearst, who after her abduction renounced her family and said she was joining her terrorist captors, was seen entering an apartment building.

Police said the three callers said the woman who entered the building was followed later by a black man carrying a rifle.

Police went to the building, made contact with the manager and showed her photographs of Hearst and SLA members William and Emily Harris, being sought on a variety of state and federal charges. The manager, Marcella Tyler, identified Hearst and Emily Harris as being seen in the building police said.

Later she told reporters she was positive she saw Hearst, but she wouldn't elaborate.

Police massed near the building. A special weapons and tactics squad team arrived, one of those which spearheaded a fiery gun battle in which six members of the SLA died here May 17.

A woman who said she was inside telephoned police and said she wanted to give herself up to "Uncle George." Miss Hearst's cousin, George Hearst Jr., is publisher of the Los Angeles Herald-Examiner. Her uncle, George Hearst Sr., died in 1972.

'Humanization' Of Boxes Urged

EDMONTON (CP) — Sociologist James Montgomery of Virginia called Wednesday for "humanization" of high-rise apartments.

"All architects do is put people in clean boxes in the sky," the 60-year-old housing expert said in an interview.

"The haven't humanized apartments. They just build those boxes and move people in, expecting everything to be all right.

"You just can't do it that way."

Dr. Montgomery said Canada has perhaps learned from the mistakes of the United States concerning over-development.

"Perhaps some have realized that you can't just build down to the water and spit into it like some places in the U.S."

Assets Frozen

WINNIPEG (CP) — Candor Developments Ltd. of Vancouver, operators of the downtown Marlborough Hotel, has been placed in receivership by the Manitoba Court of Queen's Bench and all assets of the company frozen July 19.

Candor principals Steve Weare and Tom McKenna purchased the 323-room Marlborough Hotel last year for $4 million and have spent a further $1 million in renovations.

Sask. Foreign Aid

REGINA (CP) — Premier Allan Blakeney announced Wednesday that the Saskatchewan government will match money raised in the province for foreign aid.

The premier said aid projects will be proposed by the Saskatchewan Council of International Organizations, a new grouping of 13 organizations and submitted to the Saskatchewan finance department, which will in turn forward the proposals to the Canadian International Development Agency in Ottawa for the federal body's approval.

A World That's Unknown Confronted at Long Last

It's years and years too late, mind you, but the study of what's loosely called "The Third World" is soon to be a part of the social studies curriculum in British Columbia schools. Tardy though it is, I'm enthusiastic about the approach to it.

I have on my desk the first draft of a teachers' manual that will be used as an introduction to the subject. It is very, very good. For one thing it was not prepared by any glib or theorizing expert but is a two-year labor of love by a group of 30 practising, practical teachers who were bank-rolled by various government and private agencies.

They are almost painfully aware, as they should be, of the need to start from scratch, that the ignorance in Canada of the poverty-stricken two-thirds of our world is all but total.

I could wish for stronger judgments on the moral and political questions, but those are conclusions that the students will reach by a study of the evidence and perhaps that is the best way.

The conditions of life in Latin-America, in Africa, in India, Pakistan and Bangladesh, in those exploited, plundered corners of the world where humanity is the first expendable, need to be recognized by Canadians at every level. We've a chance for leadership in that Third World. Many of our more responsible leaders have recognized it. But we've been denied that role simply because Canadians simply do not know or, seemingly, care about the truth of it.

It is not a world in which progress comes as a natural growth. As it is now the only hope for change seems to be in violence, in an all but inevitable clash between rich and poor, oppressed and oppressors.

The manual quotes President Nyerere, of Tanzania, in what we need to know most. "Both nationally and internationally this division of mankind into a tiny minority of rich and a great majority of poor is rapidly becoming intolerable to the majority, as it should be," Nyerere observed. "The poor nations and the poor peoples of the world are already in rebellion. If they do not succeed in securing a change which leads towards greater justice, then that rebellion will become an explosion."

That prophecy and its dreadful consequences, described by one statesman as "the most imperative debate of our time," can only be averted if the people and the leaders of the one-third of the world that enjoys affluence move quickly to share their wealth. We need to know of the new kind of economic materialism that's replaced the old-fashioned colonialism and perpetuated the illiteracy, the hunger, the deep poverty and the hate that lie just across every horizon.

Again, President Nyerere has put it in the most explicit terms: "The significance about this division between rich and poor is not simply that one man has more food than he can eat, more clothes than he can wear, and more houses than he can live in, while others are hungry, unclad or homeless. The reality and the depth of the problem arises because the man who is rich has power over the lives of those who are poor, and the rich nation has power over the policies of those who are not rich. And even more important is that a social and economic system, nationally and internationally, supports these divisions and constantly increases them so that the rich get ever richer and more powerful, while the poor get relatively ever poorer and less able to control their own future."

I believe now that this can only be learned by young people who study it in school and that we will have to wait for the next generation to achieve that awareness.

This, at any rate, was the sad lesson learned by Ralph Allen, who was far and away the greatest Canadian editor of them all. Allen, as editor of the Toronto Star, had become fed up with the slanted reports of American wire agency correspondents in Latin America. When he decided to appoint the first resident Canadian correspondent in the southern hemisphere I had the great good luck to win the assignment.

★ ★ ★

We shared in the kudos that followed this decision and certainly, for me, the two years in Rio de Janeiro and Buenos Aires were an education. All we lacked was readership. Time after time the Star's surveys showed that subscribers would avidly read about a violent death in Etobicoke, for example, but could not be induced to read about six million people dying of malnutrition in the northeast of Brazil.

It was Allen's theory that Canadians simply could not understand or relate to the kind of soul-destroying poverty that afflicts two-thirds of our world.

We have, by definition, the "poor", but we simply can't imagine what it's like to literally starve. Allen, himself, could see no way to bridge this gap.

The teachers' manual notes, "we should be outraged at the injustice of underdevelopment" and quotes a World Council of Churches conclusion that "it would be wrong for every North American child to have an electric toothbrush before every Latin American child has a daily bottle of milk." But newspaper coverage alone for an adult reader obviously was not the answer.

My hope now is that the gap may be closed by presenting the facts to the more receptive minds of students and that the various teaching devices outlined in the manual may help to bring home an awareness of the way things really are.

One such device calls upon the students to imagine what life might be like living on less than $100 a year, the average income in that Third World. That is terribly difficult. Can a Canadian really visualize what it is like for the 250,000 people of Calcutta who live in the streets or the 40,000 Colombians who occupy the shack-town in Cali without water, sanitation or electric light or a life expectancy of 40 years?

At least is is a bold, if long-delayed, start toward that basic understanding and if it works at all it may just be the most important lesson they'll ever learn.

Developer Seeks Views On Inner Harbor Site

Vancouver developer Ben Wosk said during a visit to Victoria Wednesday he is trying to "get the feel" of what the provincial government and city of Victoria would like to see constructed on Inner Harbor waterfront.

He said he is among a number of people who have expressed interest in harbor property, upon which the province has clapped a development freeze between Laurel Point and Johnson Street bridge.

Wednesday he had an informal meeting with Lands, Forests and Water Resources Minister Bob Williams, whose department represents provincial government interest in the frontage. He met previously with officials at city hall.

Wosk's main interests in Vancouver are as owner of a large furniture retail organization and developer of hotels. He indicated his interests here might be along commercial and accommodation lines.

But he said there was no point in talking about proposals in detail until he learned what the two levels of government — which control the type and extent of development — have in mind for the areas of waterfront formerly occupied by Bapco Paint (Laurel Point) and industrial buildings along the northeast shore adjoining the downtown business sector.

The province has been sitting on an architectural-planning report from former city planner Roderick Clack, now assistant general manager and planning director of the National Capital Commission which loaned his services for the purpose.

His recommendations have not been disclosed by Williams, who is chairman of the government's land-use committee, but Clack has said he did not urge establishment of a provincial capital commission to steer harbor development.

The province is one of the biggest land owners on the waterfront, having purchased the Wharf Street property of developer John Reid for $1.7 million after the city approved its sale to Commonwealth Holiday Inns of Canada Ltd.

Land Plan 'Comedy Of Errors'

The provincial government's agricultural land reserve plan for southern Vancouver Island was labelled "a comedy of errors" by the Capital Regional District board Wednesday.

Directors complained that the regional district put in months of work recommending what land should be reserved for farming, only to find some farming land excluded and some non-farming land included in the plan set down by the B.C. land commission.

"This is just damn nonsense. Let them come forth and explain," said Victoria Ald. Alf Hood.

His motion to request land commission members to attend a regional board meeting to explain anomalies was unanimously endorsed.

"They scuttled everything," said Central Saanich Mayor Jean Butler who added she could go on for several hours pinpointing errors.

"It's a schemozzle," said Victoria Ald. Tom Christie.

"It's a comedy of errors. It's just unbelievable. Shocking," said Saanich Ald. Fred (Whitey) Severson.

Regional board chairman Jim Campbell said the land commission "included quite a large amount" of land which is not agricultural. Parts of some Indian reserves were included and some were excluded from the plan without regard to soil classifications.

"We are entitled to some form of explanation from the land commissioin," he said.

Sooke director Ron Dumont asked that a bylaw be prepared, covering his whole electoral area, to provide for a 10-acre subdivision minimum because "a great amount of farmland has been released from the land freeze."

NEW CENTRE FOR DROPOUTS

The Boys' Club of Greater Victoria has established a centre in Royal Oak which will be used by 20 teenaged dropouts when the program doubles in size in September.

The boys will move into the Royal Oak Scout Hall in September, as long as the federal government comes through with the necessary budget increases, club director Tony Gascoyne said today. He said he expects the increased funds to be granted.

The club's application to use the top floor of the former Royal Oak Hospital in Saanich as a centre was turned down last week by Saanich council in favor of a group of artists who had applied to use the hospital site first.

Gascoyne said Saanich council members had arranged for a meeting between the club and the Scout executive committee and that negotiations have now been completed.

The Royal Oak hall would be a sub-centre to the main centre on Yates Street, Gascoyne said.

The club is also looking for a suitable facility in the Burnside-Tillicum area to use as a similar sub-centre.

If the site for the second sub-centre is found, the club would be doubling the number of boys it can handle.

"We want to up our number from 40 to 80 boys and even if we get the 80 we won't be able to handle all the applications we have," he said.

The boys' club is provided with teachers from the Victoria school district to help with the academic work. The boys also work outside, maintaining the grounds at the G. R. Pearkes Clinic for Handicapped Children, and cutting and selling firewood.

Gascoyne said the club was establishing the sub-centres rather than housing all 80 boys in one place because "it was the numbers and competitiveness that drove many of these boys out of the regular schools in the first place and we don't want to repeat that."

The club is currently negotiating with the Saanich school board to set up a similar program in that district.

Gascoyne said the Peninsula program would be completely self-contained and separate from the Greater Victoria program.

The board considered the program at its last meeting but decided to put off any decision until its first August meeting, Gascoyne said.

"Even if it goes through, I wouldn't expect that program to be established much before Christmas."

ARSON CHARGED

Arnold Gordon Mason, 42, was charged with arson in Victoria provincial court today after a fire in his home at 3330 Happy Valley early this morning.

Mason was remanded to Aug. 1 for election of trial method and plea.

There were no occupants in the small home when fire broke out in the kitchen about 4:55 a.m., causing about $19,000 damage, Colwood RCMP report.

Police Seek Witnesses In Stabbing

Victoria police are requesting help from the public in locating witnesses to a stabbing at Fernwood and Pandora sometime between 2:30 and 3 p.m. Wednesday.

Christopher Fuller, 23, of 776 Dominion, was stabbed twice in the left shoulder as he walked near the intersection.

Police said he was stabbed after three "well-dressed men in their early 20s" drove up in a turquoise 1966 Comet, got out and attacked him.

Police believe there were three of four people in the area who might have seen the incident.

Fuller is in fair condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital today.

Ex-Butcher Gets Fine For Tax Trim

A former Oak Bay meat market owner was fined a total of $3,514.35 in provincial court today for evading income tax and making false statements on his tax returns.

George Slater, 61, former operator of Slater's First Class Meats at 2577 Cadboro Bay, had earlier pleaded guilty to a four-count charge under the Income Tax Act.

Judge R. B. Allan of Nelson, presiding in a Victoria court section during the holiday of another judge, imposed fines just $150 over the minimum.

Slater had been charged with making false statements on his tax returns for the years 1970 through 1972 and evading taxes of $10,830 by failing to report income of $34,123 over those years.

When the case first appeared before Judge William Ostler, the judge said he had known the accused for "a substantial period in his role as a tradesman" and transferred the case to Allan's court.

Federal tax investigator G. G. Barras told the court earlier that a routine audit was under way at the meat market last August when Slater "told our auditor he had not reported all of his income."

Investigation revealed sales of $300 a week had not been reported.

Slater paid $8,979 in taxes on income he originally declared in the three years. Penalties and other assessments had since increased what he owed to $31,799.

The Slaters had received legal advice that Mrs. Slater could work in the store but should not be paid a salary, defence counsel Louis Lindholm told the court. Had the business been incorporated, total taxes could have been legally reduced to $13,182.

Slater's store was sold last September for $25,000 plus stock and court was told that Slater is not in good health and cannot take a full-time job.

Judge Allan said today there were mitigating circumstances in the case and he had taken into account testimony on Slater's good character, his admission of wrong doing to authorities and his co-operation with them.

Had Slater been familiar with tax law he could have legally avoided much of the tax assessed against him, the judge said.

Character witnesses Wednesday included Oak Bay Mayor Brian Smith, like Ostler a former customer, who told the court the store had provided "absolutely top service."

Jack Elliott, 80, of 305 King George, a former magistrate in the Sooke-Jordan River area, told the court he had found Slater a first-class citizen.

Judge Allan noted that Slater has paid all taxes and penalties owing and has already suffered "a severe penal consequence of his act."

Tennis Court Under Study For Oak Bay

Oak Bay aldermen and the Greater Victoria school board are exploring the feasibility of jointly developing a major tennis layout, possibly with a protective "bubble," behind Oak Bay junior secondary school.

Mayor Brian Smith said today that a meeting between representatives of both parties Wednesday evening produced "good co-operation" as costs and ways the project might be handled were discussed.

School board chairman Peter Bunn said today trustees are dedicated to community sharing of school facilities but there is much to be settled before the tennis proposal could be realized.

Smith said two proposals are under consideration with one being a four-court layout covered by a plastic bubble in winter to provide year-round play. Such bubbles, now in use at several locations on the Lower Mainland, are portable, can be put up in a day, and cost about $150,000.

Both Bunn and Smith are enthused about the prospect of a major tennis teaching layout because they point out tennis is a lifetime sport, unlike many others played in school.

Tennis is also reputedly the fastest-growing sport on the continent.

Smith said council and the board will meet again on the subject. If it goes ahead, applications for grants will be made to both provincial and federal governments.

Bunn said one of the problems with the Oak Bay junior site is lack of land. There are only 7.6 acres at the school site when there should be 13 acres.

He said one thing needed now is a mini-seminar of school physical and education teachers to thrash out merits of the idea.

If they favor more development of sports which students can continue after leaving school such as tennis, it could mean a turn-around in the physical education curriculum, he said.

Truck Foes Called Selfish

A group of Cordova Bay residents who want heavy truck traffic out of their area have adopted a "selfish attitude and only want to get the problem off their road and on to someone else's" Saanich Ald. William Noel said today.

Noel said alderman and staff had been working on the problem, "but it can't happen overnight."

The residents say they are primarily concerned about the noise made by the cement and dump trucks which drive along Cordova Bay Road from a gravel pit near Mattick's Farm on Cordova Bay.

Susan Lazaruk, 4900 Cordova Bay Road, said the noise from the trucks was "nerve-racking."

She said tests had been done on the noise level, showing it to be about 45 decibels when the trucks were not going through and between 80 and 90 decibels when they were.

The residents protested to Saanich council in February about the truck traffic and said the safety of their children was involved. Council at that time lowered the speed limit from 30 to 25 miles per hour.

The residents have written another letter to council asking for a meeting to talk about the problem and have threatened to get a supreme court injunction to stop the trucks if they do not get the meeting.

They have also discussed setting up a barricade of baby buggies if they can't get the injunction.

Noel said the residents would probably be asked to attend the next public works committee meeting Aug. 13.

"We have not been idle on this," Noel said. "We have discussed alternatives to the route along Cordova Bay and the only answer may involve buying a piece of property to realign Cordova Bay Road where it meets the Pat Bay highway."

Noel said the trucks were only a half mile from the highway, but that Cordova Bay Road goes down too steep a grade where it meets the highway for the trucks to cope with.

"It's a safety thing. These trucks are heavily loaded and all it would take would be one failure of brakes on that steep grade down to the highway. If a bus was coming along the highway we could have a terrible accident and we just don't want to risk that."

Clarence Rossner, 5065 Cordova Bay, and another member of the group, said they had asked council in February for sidewalks and crosswalks in the area, but that nothing had been done.

Pub Plan Support Sought

Proponents of a neighborhood pub in the city's Fernwood area are seeking neighborhood support today while in Oak Bay aldermen continue to worry about potential traffic problems from a pub proposed there.

The Fernwood pub, suggested by Ron Spence, president of the Fernwood Community association, would offer a "quiet, controlled family atmosphere," says a circular distributed to about 2,000 area residents — a place "where people can congregate and relax in a local and friendly atmosphere."

Under new liquor regulations, residents within a six-block radius of the proposed pub site (the old Weston Bakeries building) must be polled for their views.

"There's a few people who don't want alcohol on their front doorsteps," said Spence of reaction he's received to date. "But quite often, after the plan is explained, they turn into the strongest supporters. There are others who are quite positive about the idea."

The pub application of Mr. and Mrs. Gaston Godbout of 203 Beechwood came before another council committee in Oak Bay Wednesday evening and again aldermen expressed concern about parking.

The Godbouts want to open a pub at 2024 Oak Bay Avenue where aldermen noted there would be room for 100 patrons but parking for only five cars.

Gas Stations Twig to No-Lead Fuel

A survey of service stations in greater Victoria Wednesday indicates about one in three this fall will be selling unleaded gasoline, the fuel needed by some new model cars.

Gas without lead is the only kind which can be used in the new model cars equipped with catalytic converters which will appear this fall.

Catalytic converters are muffler-like pollution control devices worth about $150. Just two tankfuls of leaded gas will clog them so badly they have to be replaced.

But auto industry spokesmen say cars with the converters, apart from producing less pollution, should give enough improved mileage to offset the extra cost in about three years. And unleaded gas should be as cheap or slightly cheaper than leaded gas.

General Motors has indicated most of its new models will have the catalytic converters and other major car makers say some of their models will as well.

A cross-Canada survey by the federal industry department indicates more than 5,000 service stations, about one in every five brand name outlets, will provide unleaded gas by Oct. 1.

Ron Baldwin, field representative for the automotive Retailers Association of B.C., also estimated about one-third of gas stations in Victoria and Vancouver will serve unleaded gas this fall.

A spokesman for Imperial Oil Ltd. said in Vancouver that while only two of the company's stations are now selling unleaded gas, 127 will be later in the year, eight of them in Greater Victoria.

Shell Canada Ltd. has 200 stations throughout the province now selling unleaded gas and the other 200 stations will be by the end of the year. Of about 40 stations in Greater Victoria, most are already selling it.

Spokesmen for Woodwards, Union 76 and Mohawk Oil service stations in the city report they've heard of no plans to install the special pumping equipment for unleaded gas. They said individual oil companies make that decision.

An example of the cost involved in adding unleaded gas was given by Al Kubicek of Al's Home Service, 3201 Douglas.

He said it involves spending $26,000 to $30,000 to put in a separate 3,000-gallon tank together with three separate pumps on three islands to serve the new cars.

"That way we get our cost recovery," he said.

The new cars with catalytic converters will have a special narrow-necked filler line to their gas tanks, too small to take the nozzle on the regular pumps for leaded gas.

This feature, designed to prevent leaded gas being accidentally pumped into them, means the new pumps handling unleaded gas require new narrow nozzles.

Brother Knows Best

DEAR ABBY: My sister-in-law is a very self-centred person. She left her husband (my brother) after 25 years of marriage, to marry a gigolo-type man.

This caused my brother to have a nervous breakdown, during which time she never came near him to offer sympathy or help to her former mate, who would have died had it not been for us — his sisters and brothers.

This faithless wife even gave custody of their 15-year-old son to her husband, saying the boy was a nuisance.

Now, after several years of ignoring my brother, this terrible woman and her gigolo husband have fallen on hard times, so they came to my brother, who offered to share his home with them.

Free room and board he's giving these worthless people! They have been there for several months now, and my brother will not permit any interference from any of his family.

Have you ever heard of a former husband permitting an erring wife and the man who broke up his marriage to be permanent guests in his home? He has no pride, apparently. Could his breakdown have addled his brain? My brother holds down a responsible, high calibre job. — Bewildered.

DEAR BEWILDERED: If your brother's brain were "addled," he couldn't be holding down a high calibre job. But addled or not, it's his home and his decision — not yours — so stay out of it.

DEAR ABBY: What do you suggest for a non-sexist salutation in a business letter?

Obviously, "Dear Sir" is inappropriate; "To Whom It May Concern" is too verbose; "Greetings" connotes induction into the armed forces.

To further true equality, especially in this male-dominated business world, a new vocabulary is necessary. — Ms. W.

DEAR MS. W.: I offer, for your consideration, the unimaginative "Sir or Madam." (Too lacking in warmth and courtesy?) or, "Attention." (Or does that suggest "Achtung!" the German command?)

"To Whom It May Concern" may be verbose, but it is non-sexist and conveys precisely what the writer has in mind, which is still communication at its best.

DEAR ABBY: Who is right? Here is the situation. My husband of three years, my in-laws and I were having supper at our house.

My husband said to me, "Honey, will you please get me some more water?" I said to him, "God gave you two strong legs. If you want more water, get it yourself, dear." (We all work full-time.)

His mother immediately jumped up from the table and got him some more water.

I said nothing at the table, but later I told my husband that I didn't think his mother should intercede in a two-way discussion between him and me.

I love and respect my mother-in-law, but I am curious as to what you think of this. — The Wife.

DEAR WIFE: Your mother-in-law should have ignored the exchange between your husband and you, but since she didn't, you shouldn't have made a big deal out of it. She probably acted out of habit. (Mothers are easily trained.)

DEAR ABBY: Am I being unreasonable? My husband's part collie dog is 19 years old. He is deaf, and nearly blind, can hardly use his back legs, and has lost control of his bowels. I have to clean up after him all the time. He whines, cries and barks during the night and I have to get up and let him out.

My husband is a sound sleeper and nothing disturbs him. I have begged him to take this dog to the vet to be put to sleep, but he says: "No! I suppose when I get sick you will want to put ME to sleep, too."

Abby, this is my second marriage and I want it to last, but I have had it with this dog of his.

I know if the dog could talk, he would beg to be put out of his misery. Please advise me. — Dog Tired.

DEAR TIRED: I'm with you. It's cruel to let the animal suffer. If your husband insists that you are wrong, get the vet's opinion. I'll bet he votes with us.

Being Taken for a Walk

I am not particularly surprised to learn that there are beauty parlors, psychiatrists, and fat farms designed especially for dogs.

Give a dog an inch, and he'll take a mile.

My dog, for instance, not only falls into bed immediately after the late night news, but he falls into MY bed, hogs the covers, and snores like an enraged water buffalo unless I can persuade him to roll over on his side.

In the morning, when the alarm clock rings, he turns it off with his nose and stands on my face until I get up to fix breakfast.

He eats when I eat and insists that I brush his teeth with his Snoopy toothbrush after each meal. To make matters worse, he refuses to eat dog food, even the type that the dogs on TV positively inhale, unless I serve it on a Limoges dinner plate and mix it with canned peaches. He wouldn't eat dog food at all if he hadn't once seen my son, finding us to be out of peanut butter and jelly, eat a Gainburger.

My dog insists on accompanying me whenever I go to the grocery store. I don't let him come in, but then I don't let the children come in either.

The children not only write to him every day from camp, but last week they sent him a genuine, hand-made Indian wallet—C.O.D.

You will never catch me bragging that my dog is almost human. I am sure that, overhearing this, he would completely lose perspective on what should constitute a dog's life and would immediately take to making long distance phone calls and ordering three-year subscriptions to "Field and Stream."

Designer Has Day Despite Rain

By ALISON LERRICK

PARIS (AP) — Wednesday was a big day in the annals of fashion.

Yves Saint Laurent, the acknowledged prince of the haute couture, showed his first collection in his brand-new palatial establishment on the Avenue Mareeau.

Escaping from a pouring rain, the audience was greeted by a serenade of gypsy violinists. You had the uncanny feeling of being received by royalty upon stepping into the gilt and red brocade salon, quite a step up from Saint Laurent's former grey velvet.

The interior designer responsible for the stately decor is Victor Grandpierre, who already has to his credit the Dior salons. Although Saint Laurent's new building is three times as big as its predecessor, the seating space is unfortunately much smaller.

Fans, including Paloma Picasso, were standing two rows deep in the back, and the general effect was one of a heap of people. Those presented included actor Yul Brynner, night club star Zizi Jeanmaire and Olympia de Rothschild. Actress Catherine Deneuve, who whisked out of the wings at the last moment, found no room left in celebrity row and was seated on a stool.

The collection was shown, as befits such a momentous occasion, in religious silence, punctuated only by frenzied applause. The clothes were pretty indeed, in the tradition of pure Saint Laurent elegance.

There were lots of man-tailored suits for all-a look that brings out the best in the tall skinny girls this designer favors.

Checked and donegal tweed severe pants suits come with paisley shirts that tie in a bow at the neck, little felt hats and red fox boas. Another choice is flaring high-calf skirts and boots.

Some suits went under belted suede coats in rust, green or taupe. There was also quite a few coachman's capes. But the trend, like at most houses this season, was toward bigness.

Generous smock coats in cashmere and velvet fell in countless folds from the yoke, with big shirt sleeves. They came with the big news for all: the shirtdress is gone; vive la chemise.

After bringing back so many other looks in the past, Saint Laurent now brings back that old favorite, the loose waistless chemise. His come at all lengths in lightweight wool printed in a blur of neutral flowers. The sleeves are loose and gathered into a cuff, and sometimes the dresses are gathered into several tiers, making for a wider shape.

You will get much more enjoyment from gazing at the star-strewn sky if you are able to recognize some of the better known constellations.

Constellations are groups of stars which appear to maintain a stable position to one another. Prehistoric man gave these star figures fancy names which have remained unchanged to this day. You have probably heard many of these, like Cassiopaia, Great Bear, Big Dipper, Vega, Lyre an so on.

But these constellations do change their position in the sky depending on the time of day and the season. This is the result of the rotation of the earth and not, as you may have thought, the movement of the stars themselves.

The 4-page folder, "The Night Sky in Summer" contains a helpful star map. Consult it while you scan the sky. It won't take long before you will be able to recognize the most prominent constellations.

The folder also reveals some mind-boggling facts about the universe. It says, for instance, that the light from the North Star, the polaris, is already 50 years old when you see it. Some of the bright stars are very much further away. Their light may take 650 years to reach earth!

Java Mission Continues

elizabeth forbes

Today I'm picking up the threads from my last column and continuing the story of Dr. Gordon Grant and his wife Ginny, who spent several months of this year in Indonesia, with the CARE-Medico program.

Solo (Surakarta) where Dr. Grant was based during his stint as a visiting hand and reconstructive surgeon-specialist, is in the Central Java valley.

Volcanoes, one active and one allegedly extinct, loom over this big city, he says, "and they would be an arresting sight in tht clearer days of the dry season."

The Grants were out there, as it happened, during the rain season and while that is supposed to be "an endurance test," they found it "a good deal more agreeable than New York, Montreal, St. Louis or Toronto on a steamy, summer day."

When it rains in Java "it does rain," but the upshot is "a beautiful cooling off in what may have become a slightly uncomfortable afternoon."

This is the fourth time Dr. Grant has travelled to faraway places as a volunteer surgeon-specialist with CARE-Medico — three times accompanies by Mrs. Grant and once alone.

So neither he nor his wife were "assaulted by cultural shock which results from a disinclination to accept indigenous peoples and their ancient folkways as they are."

He found the Javanese will and do accept . . . modern medical and surgical treatment, especially when they see the thing works."

On the other hand "they emphatically will not tolerate slurs on, nor attempts to change, their cultural and religious patterns."

Javanese patients take "with amazing stoicism even the most drastic attacks on their often hideous congenital and trauma deformities."

However, the visiting specialist "soon discovers why experienced hands elect the conservative over the bold approach."

In a humid climate, where protein intake is low and carbohydrate high, "the victim of trauma or a congenital deformity may be dangerously anemic and his serum protein at a level that all but precludes safe healing."

Nevertheless, grafts, both flap and free, do take, Dr. Grants says, despite this fact.

Although his base was at the almost fully Canadian-manned Mangkubumen Hospital at Solo, he did visit, lecture and operate at Semarang Hospital on the north coast of Java and at Jogyakarta, on the south coast.

At Solo, the Grants lived in a house next to the hospital, provided for them by CARE.

Servants were available, Ginny Grant says, "in numbers and at wages to boggle the minds of those who find it hard to get a gardener or a cleaning woman at a reasonable wage here at home."

Their Bu — pronounced Boo — could have made a fortune in Canada as a cordon bleu cook and the "deceptively slow-moving" cleaning girl, in a matter of hours "could bring back any and all kinds of apparel, snowy clean and impeccably pressed."

Mrs. Grant, who is president of the Victoria Conservatory of Music, based in Craigdarroch Castle, found Central Java rich in a culture "in which we only had time to lift the lid."

She has come back with memories of bazaars and shops "in which exquisite batik is sold at preposterously low prices;" of listening to "fascinating" gamelan music — the word gamelan meaning "orchestra" as near as she can translate it. And in seeing a Javanese ballet master improvise and create a western cowboy exercise, in her honor.

As he looks back on Solo, Dr. Grant repeats over and over again that the Canadian team in the hospital there could use reinforcements both for the team and in the way of visiting specialists.

Wives are welcomed — doubly so if they have some knowledge of nursing, can type or handle files.

He also points out that Medico is one of the strong arms of CARE of Canada and that Canadians, whether they speak French, English, or both, have been active in Medico, since its birth in 1958.

Those who work for CARE-Medico, in faraway countries, fall mainly into two categories. Team members who serve two or more years and visiting specialists who, as volunteers, give short periods of time.

Teams "provide expertise of many kinds and the settings and the tools to enable visiting specialists to work, and above all to teach," Dr. Grant says.

Then he concludes: "to operate is nothing; to teach is everything."

Diefenbaker Aide Finds Pace Hectic

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

Working with John Diefenbaker, the grand old man of Canadian politics, is like "going to a different movie every day."

And trying to follow The Chief, who's still going strong at 78, through an election campaign as his personal secretary is like trying to follow "an India rubber ball."

Betty Eligh, who has been here on a rare vacation for the past two weeks has been Diefenbaker's secretary for the past four and a half years.

"It's been exciting and rewarding and every day is a fun day," she said.

But the job is also exhausting, mainly because Diefenbaker works at a breakneck speed seven days a week and, at times, 24 hours a day.

Mrs. Eligh is spending her vacation with her brother, Gray Campbell, owner of Gray's Publishing in Deep Cove. Before coming here she spent the weeks of the federal election campaign in Prince Albert, Sask., Diefenbaker's home riding.

"During the election he went seven days a week. He goes to bed late at night absolutely exhausted, but then he gets up the next day and he's just bounced right back. He's like an India rubber ball."

Mrs. Eligh, a lithe, fair-haired woman who's "over 50 and feels 35" is thinking of retiring and moving to her brother's place in Deep Cove," but I can't give this up and I don't want to leave Mr. Diefenbaker.

"It's exciting and great fun to work with someone like him. He has a tremendous sense of fun and a twinkle all the time. He can see the fun in everything. But Mr. Diefenbaker, God love him, is not the easiest person to be with."

Mrs. Eligh, a widow who previously worked for Senator Eugene Forsey, is philosophical about the rigors of her job.

"You pay for advantages in life. If you work or live with someone who's quiet and dull then you have a quiet life and it doesn't take anything out of you. But if you do the same with someone who's exciting and always doing something then it does take it out of you — but who would change this?"

DIEFENBAKER
. . . a busy 78

In April, Mrs. Eligh went with Diefenbaker on a whirlwind 10-day tour of Israel, as guests of the Jewish National Fund of Canada, a group which bought a piece of land in the country to be dedicated as Canada Park.

"It was worth every minute of it. We were on the go constantly," she said.

Mrs. Eligh and the rest of the tour group met with Golda Meir, who Mrs. Eligh described as a "strong woman, full of personality. We met her at a time when she was discouraged and had decided to step down, but she was still strong and happy."

Mrs. Eligh spends some of her time in The Chief's office on Parliament Hill sorting through the pile of mail he receives every day.

"He gets mail from coast to coast and from people between five and 90 years old — they all relate to him and it's been rewarding and exciting to help people in Mr. Diefenbaker's name.

"People think there is no one else to turn to and then they remember him because he has a reputation as a champion of the underdog.

"People write in for help on problems in penitentiaries, and men write for help on pensions and unemployment insurance and everything from divorces to being flooded out in the spring.

"Some just write and say they should have written a long time ago to say what a great job he has done. We get letters from little kids who say they want to be prime minister some day and would like to know how to go about it."

Mrs. Eligh also sorts through the thousands of speaking invitations that come in from all over Canada.

"He's become a legend while he's still living," she said.

"People look up to him and they need someone they can look up to, it's important to people."

She said she expects the mood to be changed by the time she gets back to Ottawa next week because of the Liberal majority.

But the work won't let up.

"I sometimes wish I kept a diary, just for myself so I could remember all the good times we've had, all the laughs. I guess there are so many that I really can't remember them."

Women Must Accept Criticism

VANCOUVER (CP) — Women in the business world must learn to accept criticism; Phyllis Young, British Columbia minister of consumer affairs says.

Young was speaking at a luncheon meeting of about 355 delegates to the conference of the Canadian Federation of Business and Professional Women's clubs meeting here at the federation's 24th Bienniel convention.

"Women tend to shrivel and withdraw from combat," she said. "They don't like criticism. Well, learn to like it. Or at least learn to live with it."

She also advised women to take advantage of the adage often used by men about women—'you never know what they'll do next.'

She said women must keep opponents off balance in the fight for equality.

"We must continue to fight individually and collectively to wipe out discrimination everywhere it rears its ugly head."

Banned Drugs Still Sold

OTTAWA (CP) — Some drug lots that failed federal tests for quality were not withdrawn from the Canadian market "because it would have been a travesty of administration of the law to do so," Dr. A. B. Morrison, assistant deputy minister of health said today.

He likened banning the 45 drug lots from sale to a policeman charging a motorist with exceeding a speed limit by half a mile an hour.

Morrison was commenting on a report that more than half the 83 drug lots that failed tests under the health department's drug quality assurance program have remained on pharmacy shelves.

Under the Food and Drugs Act, drug lots that fail the tests should not be sold.

LOOP, SQUIGGLE CAN BARE PERSONALITIES

TORONTO (CP) — The loops, swirls and squiggles ge of handwriting may seem merely decorative—or illegible. But to Hannah Milner Smith, each curve is a clue to character, personality, even love life.

Mrs. Smith is one of Canada's top graphologists or handwriting experts. Handwriting is as individual as a person's fingerprints. She has been studying it since she was 16 years old.

"I used to study the handwriting in the register of my father's hotel and I wondered why every signature seemed to be different," she said. "I began to watch the guests more closely."

She soon found that the traveller who wrote large, forwardslanting words with open As and Os was likely to be friendly and self-assured.

The quieter personality would write with smaller letters. Often his writing was straight up and down, or backhand with closed As and Os, she said.

Mrs. Smith said she thought she had discovered a new science until she saw an advertisement in a magazine offering handwriting analysis and a booklet giving a short course in graphology. She sent for it and has been studying ever since.

Now based in Vancouver, Mrs. Smith is frequently asked to assist physhiatrists, teachers, welfare workers and the police.

Mrs. Smith has analysed the handwriting of Sirhan Sirhan, Senator Robert Kennedy's assassin, President Kennedy and kidnapped diplomat James Cross. She has studied the writing of prisoners, hospital patients and schoolchildren.

"Graphology can be used in just about every walk of life," she said. "For psychiatrists, psychologists and welfare workers, it can be a tool to provide additional insight into the people they are trying to help.

British Developing Male Pill for 1979

LONDON (AP) — A contraceptive pill for men may be on the market in five years, a leading British physician said Tuesday.

Dr. Arnold Bergen, director of the British National Institute for Medical Research, said encouraging research toward the development of such a pill had been carried out by Dr. Harold Jackson at Christie Hospital in Manchester.

Experiments in which the pill would be administered to animals might begin within a year, he said.

Bergen added that the most promising formula for a contraceptive pill taken by men is based on chlorohydrin, a substance used in fighting cancer.

Another medical group said Tuesday that the effects of vasectomies might be less-easily reversible than previously believed.

Father Charged in Fire Deaths

ST. JEROME, Que. (CP) — Coroner Cyrille Delage Wednesday found a 37-year-old Montreal businessman criminally reponsible for the deaths of his three young children by fire one year ago.

He ruled that the testimony of Gabriel Belanger during the coroner's inquest "left too many questions unanswered" for it to be believed.

One hour after the verdict was read in this Laurentian community 30 miles north of Montreal, Belanger was arraigned in court on arson charges.

Manon Belanger, 10, her sister Sylvie, 8, and Pierre Luc, 6, were killed last July 27 when fire destroyed the family cottage 40 miles north of here.

Belanger, the only other person home when the fire began at 2 a.m., escaped unharmed. He subsequently collected $105,000 from life insurance policies he had taken out on his children in 1971.

Coroner Delage said he did not believe Belanger's testimony that when he woke up and opened the bedroom door he found the house in flames, making a rescue effort for the children impossible.

Witnesses testified that Belanger made no attempt to rescue the children from their second-storey bedrooms, even though rescue attempts were possible in their opinion.

The coroner said testimony from other witnesses showed that Belanger was in financial difficulty at the time of the fire, and he noted the children were insured for amounts "much higher than children of that age would normally be insured for."

Coroner Delage said the deaths occurred under "very troubling circumstances and lead me to believe that they were not caused accidentally but by the voluntary action of an individual.

"Gabriel Belanger was the only person on the premises at the time of the fire to survive, and he had a large financial interest in the deaths of his children and the destruction of his cottage."

WHELAN SLAMS PRESS

WINNIPEG (CP) — Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan Wednesday attacked "big city press" editorial writers and said he can add them to a list of agriculture problem-solvers that includes economists with weird and wonderful ideas and not a clue on how farmers think and operate.

"If you want a short course on how to ruin Canada's agriculture industry and how to put every farmer into bankruptcy, then pick up any dozen of the editorials that have appeared in the big city papers about food prices over the past two weeks," he said.

In a speech prepared for delivery to the youth convention of the National Farmers Union, the minister said:

"I think a bunch of those editorial writers must have been working on the Conservative platform for the last election. And you remember where I said their Conservative price freeze would end up — in the manure pile.

"Well, that's a good place for most of the editorials on agriculture policy, except they would probably give next year's crop a fit of indigestion."

The minister said many city reporters forget that he is as concerned that the consumer receives a steady supply of wholesome food at reasonable prices as he is to provide the agriculture industry with a reasonable income comparable to the rest of Canadian society.

He said much of the news media forgets about the farmers, adding "it's a good thing that city newspaper readers have a lot more common sense than the editorial writers."

Whelan said the future of the Canadian farmer has to improve. Farmers' standards of living had to get better and they had to have more confidence in the future.

Massive Farms Worry Ministers

WINNIPEG (CP) — Canada's provincial ministers of agriculture expressed concern Wednesday about the possible long-term effects of unrestricted growth in the size of farm enterprises.

The ministers also said they are worried about the amount of land held by persons who are interested in controlling farm land for reasons other than making a living from farming.

A statement issued at the end of the first day of the meeting of ministers and their deputies said while all are concerned about the problems, there was no agreement on a solution.

The ministers agreed to express their concern on land use to the next conference of provincial premiers and to the Canadian Council of Resource and Environmental Ministers.

The ministers, whose three-day closed-door conference ends Friday, said it is important that due attention be paid to agriculture in any deliberations on how land is used.

Saskatchewan Agriculture Minister Jack Messer opened the talks with a province-by-province review of legislation and plans to control ownership and the size of farm holdings.

A related report by British Columbia delegates on agricultural land use management prompted the expression of common concerns, but few common answers to problems.

Reopens Friday

WHITEHORSE, Y.T. (CP) — A spokesman for the Yukon territorial government said Wednesday the Alaska Highway would be re-opened to two-way traffic Friday.

Government spokesman Ken Sillak said motorists are still being urged to wait until Monday before heading south from the Yukon to B.C. so that a backlog of heavy trucks in Fort Nelson could be moved out.

The Alaska Highway has been closed since last week because of numerous road and bridge washouts due to flooding.

Student Torture Charges Denied

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Florida minister says overzealous committee investigators have bilked senators into believing the school he ran for emotionally disturbed children was conducted like a Nazi concentration camp.

Rev. George von Hilsheimer denied Wednesday that he or his staff engaged in systematic beatings or torture of the children, a charge he said gained credibility by being repeated over and over.

The Senate permanent investigations subcommittee is holding hearings on allegations of child abuse at von Hilsheimer's Green Valley School in Orange City, Fla..

The subcommittee was to take up today the allegations about the institute in Michigan, where committee investigators are reported to have found widespread use of drugs. The investigators said punishments at the University Centre included placing boys in a basement solitary confinement room called "the Dungeon" for extended periods.

Land Plan Adopted

The fourteenth regional district in B.C. qualified Wednesday under the Land Commission Act to have its agricultural land reserve plan adopted by the provincial government.

Approval of the district of Central Okanagan plan completes the establishment of the agricultural zone in Okanagan and Similkameen valleys, the province's largest tree fruit and wine-grape-growing areas.

The two other largest areas of concern — lower Fraser Valley and Saanich Peninsula — had previously had agricultural land reserve plans approved.

Another 13 land reserve plans are under consideration. There are 28 regional districts in B.C.

Adoption of the plans frees areas from the land development freeze imposed in December, 1972.

Agriculture Minister David Stupich said land needs for a rapidly-growing population must be directed outside agricultural land reserves.

Flowers, Music Offered

An idyllic combination of flowers and music is being offered at Christ Church Cathedral this weekend.

Complementing the flower festival will be music recitals at 4 and 8 p.m. Saturday.

Opening service of the festival is scheduled for tonight at 8. The cathedral will be open for viewing between 10 a.m. and 9:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

Regular services will be held Sunday and the public may again view the decorations between 1 and 5 p.m.

The 4 p.m. recital on Saturday will feature soprano Carla Levinson and pianist Jean Ethridge-Nordstrom in songs by Bach, Handel and Faure. A highlight of the program will be Franz Schubert's Shepherd on the Rocks in which the artists will be joined by clarinettist Betty Harbord.

St. John's organist Edward Norman will be the evening recitalist.

Twenty-four Anglican churches and the altar and chancel guilds of the cathedral have participated in the floral work, which will include a large cross of red carnations behind the altar and hanging gardens. Visitors will find a brochure containing history and information to guide them in their exploration.

Refreshments will be served Friday and Saturday between 11 a.m. and 5:30 p.m. in the Memorial Hall behind the cathedral.

All cash contributions will be donated to the Community Chest and the Primate's World Relief Fund.

Vatican Joins Mail Complaints

VATICAN CITY (Reuter) — Many readers of the Vatican Newspaper, L'Osservatore Romano, are waiting at least a month for their daily copy because of Italy's poor postal service.

More than 80 per cent of subscribers are sent their paper by mail and the Vatican has complained in an editorial that many only now are receiving June editions.

Sasquatch Hunters Beware!

HARRISON LAKE — A frigid welcome awaits any would-be Sasquatch hunters at a remote camp on this lake about 80 miles northwest of Vancouver.

"This is private property and anyone who comes here will be asked to leave," camp director Wayne Jones said.

Jones saw what he believed was a Sasquatch at the camp last Thursday, but kept the sighting secret until Tuesday.

Then the visitors began dropping in at the camp.

There were two California men on a fishing trip, three professional Sasquatch hunters including Rene Dahinden, and a reporter and photographer.

Jones said he would block the road and a gravel strip on which the Californians landed their plane. The story reached the news media accidentally and he was determined not to encourage its spread, Jones said.

CHICAGO — Judge Otto Kerner, the first U.S. federal judge to be convicted and sentenced while still on the bench, resigned Wednesday — five days before he was scheduled to begin serving a three-year prison sentence.

Kerner, 65, also a former Illinois governor and U.S. attorney, was convicted with former Illinois director of revenue Ted Isaacs of making a $300,000 profit on racetrack stock given them as a bribe by racing heiress Marjorie Lindheimer Everett between 1961 and 1968 when Kerner was governor. He was sentenced to three years for fraud, tax evasion and conspiracy.

LANGLEY — Mrs. Barbara Timmerman blocked men working on a road widening project here from tearing up her front lawn for the second consecutive day Wednesday.

She said, however, that city clerk John Spanier scuffled with her in trying to remove her from her lawn and said workmen managed to tear up three full-grown fir trees before she could stop them.

HONG KONG — A 19-year-old movie actress who said she was mentally depressed after starring in a film, in which she appeared partly nude, was found dead in her apartment Wednesday.

Police suspected Pal Siuman, who recently appeared in a movie entitled Sex, Wine and Song, had taken an overdose of sleeping pills.

Three letters were found by the woman's body. They were addressed to her mother, sister and brother.

In the letter to her mother, she said: "I regret having made this film — it is too obscene."

NEW YORK — Singer and songwriter Peter Allen has been granted an uncontested divorce from actress Liza Minnelli. Allen, 30, told the judge he and Miss Minelli, 28, have been separated for more than a year, which is grounds for divorce in New York. They were married in 1967, but have lived apart since 1970.

LONDON — Mia Farrow has won undisclosed damages against a British newspaper over an article on her alleged unhappy relationship with co-star Robert Redford during the filming of Great Gatsby.

The article was title: "How do you kiss a man you can't stand?"

Her lawyer made it clear it had been no hardship for her to kiss Redford.

"Throughout the production of the film and at all times Miss Farrow has enjoyed an entirely happy personal and professional relationship with Mr. Redford and there was never any question of interference with the production of the film," he said.

LONDON — Harmonica virtuoso Larry Adler said Wednesday that Canadian customs levied a tax on the mouth organ he took to Montreal with him last Sunday for his appearances with the Montreal Symphony.

"It's the first time in 46 years I've ever been charged by customs for the instrument by which I make my living," said Adler.

OTTAWA — Gov.-Gen. Jules Leger is said by aides to be making a steady recovery from his stroke six weeks ago, but he hasn't yet indicated whether he will remain in office indefinitely.

Meanwhile, he is taking daily walks around the grounds of Rideau Hall, his officitl residence, and he is receiving therapy for a partial paralysis of his left arm.

9 IN MEMORIAM

BROWN — In loving memory of my dear husband, who passed away July 25, 1973. Lonely is the home without you.

Life to me is not the same,
All the world would be like heaven,
If I could have you back again.
What he suffered he told but few,
He did not deserve what he went through.
Tired and weary, he made no fuss,
But tried so hard to stay with me.
Two tired eyes are sleeping,
Two willing hands are still.
The one who worked so hard for me,
Is resting at God's will.

— Sadly missed by his wife Ivy.

ROACH — In memory of a loving husband and father.

Deep in the heart lies a picture
Of a loved one laid to rest
In memory's frame we shall keep it
"Because he was one of the best.

—Viola, Cherie and family.

Top Grade 12 Student

The governor-general's silver medal for the top-ranking Grade 12 scholar this year was won by Salmon Arm senior secondary school graduate Brett Gordon Giles of Enderby.

He attained an average of 93.5 per cent on exams in mathematics, physics and chemistry.

A Vancouver student, Rhonda Lisa Nishiguchi, of Sir Winston Churchill secondary, was second highest in the province and won the governor-general's bronze medal with ther average 91.2 per cent in English literature, history and biology.

Education Minister Eileen Dailly expects some 1,800 Grade 12 students will win $200 scholarship awards when results come out about the middle of August, up from 1,700 last year.

Impaired Boating Charge Laid

A Victoria man has been charged with impaired boating after police stopped a 14-foot aluminum runabout off Ogden Point at 5:45 p.m. Tuesday.

Edward Bruce Scott, 32, of 1225 Juno, appeared before Judge Fred Green in provincial court Wednesday and was remanded to Aug. 1 for plea.

There were five people aboard the boat when it was stopped, police said.

Impaired boating is a criminal offence under section 240(4) of the Criminal Code.

False Pretense Charges Laid

Victoria police have charged a 24-year-old Vancouver man with false pretences alleging he obtained amost $1,000 worth of goods from five downtown stores Tuesday and Thursday.

Charles Wayne Shepherd, appeared in Victoria provincial court this morning where a seven-count charge was read. He was remanded in custody to Aug. 1 for election of trial method and plea.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett said Shepherd is wanted in Vancouver where 16 charges of false pretence are outstanding and involving $3,500 worth of goods.

Birkett said the accused also faces similar charges in Chilliwack area.

Judge William Ostler said it "would not be in the interests of the public to release Shepherd pending trial."

Cigarette Set Mattress Fire

A Victoria man suffered smoke inhalation when fire broke out in his room at the Chandler Hotel, 723 Yates, shortly before 7 a.m. Wednesday.

James Scoular, 61, was taken to Victoria General Hospital where he was treated, detained for a few hours, and released.

A fire department spokesman said only a mattress in Scoular's room had been destroyed by fire. He blamed the fire on careless smoking.

FINAL STEP in Dave Kunst's "walk around the world" will be the 2,000 miles from his brother's house in Santa Ana, Calif., to his home in Minnesota. Kunst, checking his supply of shoes, began the walk with another brother, John, in June, 1970, as a promotion for UNICEF. John was killed by bandits in Afghanistan, but Dave has continued—by foot, mule and wagon.

High Fashion, Low Coverage

PARIS (Reuter) — Topless black models—wearing only tiny, white-knit bikini bottoms—stole the show today at the Paris fashion collection of Andre Courreges.

The models carried broomstick-size knitting needles, pretending they were still making their bikini tops as they came on stage.

The Courreges collection was the most amusing to watch in Paris, with a joke or gag every minute.

It depicted such situations as the moon landings or the frustration of the housewife coping with her telephone while watching the dinner cook on the stove.

Knitwear played an important role in the Courreges collection, with large knit and pearl stitches employed for long evening sheaths with draw-string waistlines and layered sweater pullovers.

There were still lots of trousers for active sportswear.

The newest shapes have a contoured waist yoke and wide legs stopping three inches above the ankle, an effect suggesting a school boy growing out of his first pair of long trousers.

The winter sport scene was enlivened by Courreges's five-year-old daughter, sprinkling plastic snow on the heads of the models.

Ski clothes featured bloused knickers for both men and women made of shiny silver asbestos, vinyl, or fur.

There was good fashion among all the fun, however.

The famous little white sheaths immortalized by Courreges in the 1960s reappeared in wool crepes or jersey.

There were little-girl dresses with tiny round collars and puffed sleeves over inset waist yokes or draw-string belts.

BYPASS BACKED AT NANAIMO

NANAIMO — A highway bypass around Nanaimo would ease a growing traffic problem in the city, the head of the Nanaimo RCMP detachment says.

Unsynchronized traffic lights combine with heavy traffic and large trucks to create bottlenecks now which a bypass could cut down, Cpl. Luke Mulder said Wednesday.

A highways department map prepared in 1973, and referred to by Mulder, shows an average daily flow of 20,000 vehicles on highways north and south of Nanaimo.

Mayor Frank Ney said Tuesday a bypass would keep about 4,000 vehicles a day out of the city, which would "be good for traffic enforcement," according to Mulder.

Mulder and Ney were commenting on a campaign by Campbell River council to have the province build an Island freeway.

Consumer Beef 'Unjustified'

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian transport commission rapped the Consumers' Association of Canada (CAC) Wednesday, suggesting that air carriers might push for unjustifiably high air fares if faced with persistent opposition.

Outlining its reasons for refusing last week to suspend recent domestic air fare increases, the commission said:

"Faced with frivolous applications for postponement of the effective date of tariffs, such action would be understandable."

Shareholders of transport companies should not have to provide service at their personal expense any more than bankers or ordinary citizens should, it added.

The commission last Friday said it saw no reason to suspend or disallow domestic fare increases filed by Air Canada, CP Air, Transair, Quebecair, Eastern Provincial Airways, Nordair and Pacific Western Airlines. The Wednesday statement gave detailed reasons for the decision.

All the increases except Nordair's, which is effective Aug. 1, went into effect last Sunday.

The consumers' group requested the public hearing which led to the commission decision. It was the first public hearing on air fares ever held by the commission.

Air Canada and CP Air had asked increases of 9.5 per cent while similar increases were sought by the regional airlines on competitive routes in southern Canada.

The airlines received domestic fare increases in February, the first in three years for Air Canada and CP Air.

During the hearing, the commission rejected a CAC request for a two-week postponement to get expert help in dealing with airline evidence.

The commission was critical of CAC evidence produced at the hearing:

"At the hearing, counsel for the CAC failed to adduce or offer any evidence which was worthy of credence to demonstrate unfairness or even raise any suspicion concerning the fairness or justness of

The usual practice in the air industry is to submit new the proposed fare increases." tariffs 30 days before the effective date. Ojections to those tariffs must be made in that 30-day period.

Anti-Trust Suit Set For AT & T

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Justice Department plans to file an anti-trust suit against American Telephone and Telegraph Co. (AT&T) soon, it was reported today.

The daily report for executives of the Bureau of National Affairs, quoting unidentified sources, said the anti-trust action would seek to force AT&T, the world's largest corporation, to divest itself of its Western Electric subsidiary.

Western Electric is a wholly owned AT&T subsidiary which supplies most of the telephone equipment of the Bell system.

"The suit will also allege that AT&T and its subsidiaries have pursued unfair marketing practices in the area of interestate private line services in order to drive competitors out of business," the report quoted sources as saying.

It quoted AT&T spokesman James Mundis as saying, "we do not believe the story."

Search for Comics Moves to Vancouver

Victoria police say 1,600 comics stolen from a Victoria bookstore over the weekend may have turned up in Vancouver.

They are investigating a report that 200 comics had been sold to a Vancouver dealer Monday. The sellers, three youths between the ages of 14 and 17, told the dealer they had 1,400 more in their car but hey never returned.

The books, stolen from Junction Books store, 587 Johnson, had a value of between $1 and $20 each.

Phil Robbie, 22-year-old comic collector and part-owner of the book store, estimated his loss at $2,500. He said the thieves "must have known their comics."

"They only took the best and most expensive editions," he said.

Robbie said he had a collection of 12,000 comic books at the time.

"They also took my price guide, which I'm particularly upset about. It'll take me a month to work out another."

Robbie, who has been a comic-collector for 10 years, said the stolen comics included 25 different titles ranging from Superman to Spiderman, Tales To Astonish and Tales of Suspense.

The most valuable edition lost was a first edition of the comic Thor, which came out in 1962 at 10 cents a copy and today sells for $20.

Garden Show Flowers Cool Summer Tribute

A good little flower and vegetable show should be seen this Saturday, July 27 at View Royal. Visitors can then admit that our summer couldn't have been as bad as they imagined.

The View Royal Garden Club is optimistic of having their summer flower classes well filled, for cool weather is lengthening the blooming season of many annuals and perennials.

Even roses are enjoying a lengthy season, with other summer shrubs maintaining bloom longer than usual.

This Club is one to realize the great variety among hydrangeas which can be and are grown locally. They have arranged four sections to the hydrangea class to exhibit different species. They found it impossible to judge the ball-shaped pink and blue H. macrophylla against the flat pure white mounds of H. arborescens; or H. arborescens against H. serrata and the hybrid Lacecap varieties. Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora (the Pee-Gee hydrangea) is a doubtful starter at a July show, it really belongs to late August and September.

However, bowls of heather should be attractive, for cloudy days are bringing into flower some which resent continuous days of full hot sun. The Irish-heath, Daboecia cantabrica in its purple-pink and pure white forms are doing exceptionally well this year aided by artificial showers in the dry spells.

Annual dahlias, from seed sown indoors in April, have been flowering outdoors since about the middle of June. At the same time I saw large cosmos flowers on three-foot plants — probably also the result of cloudy cool weather.

View Royal gardeners have a great variety of terrain. Some gardens are on sloping rocky ground open to full sunshine; others are secluded, level and have developed a deep rich soil;

Still others are rather heavily tree shaded. Most are relatively free from hard frost in winter since the area lies on a bluff above salt water.

Vegetables do well in View Royal because they may get an early start. While warm weather vegetables will be slow this year as with the rest of us, a good showing should turn up in classes for lettuce, peas, carrots, potatoes, broccoli and beets. But outdoor cucumber is likely to be a rarity even by late August.

★

If you want to see how other garden areas are doing this summer, take a run out to View Royal on Saturday.

The show will open at 2.30 Saturday afternoon (July 27) in the All Saints Parish Hall, Stewart and Pallisier, closing at 6 p.m. Admission 35 cents. Refreshments will be available during the afternoon.

SOLUTION FRIDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

As principle, when one leads a queen on the opening lead, he is presumed to have the jack. But, based on subsequent developments, it may become apparent that the queen was not a part of a Q-J combination.

The latter was the case in today's deal, which was played in a team-of-four match.

Both sides vulnerable. West deals.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♡	2 ♠
3 ♡	3 ♠	Pass	4 ♠
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♣.

After capturing West's queen of clubs with his ace, declarer cashed the ace of trumps. He then led a low trump towards dummy's queen, West's king winning. West led back the two of hearts, dummy's queen being taken by East's king.

It was rather obvious to East that West had just underled his ace of hearts. On reflection, it became apparent that the only justification for West's dangerous underlead was that West had no more clubs. So East returned a club, which West ruffed with the jack. In time, the defenders made a diamond trick, to hand declarer a one-trick set.

When the deal was replayed, the identical four-spade contract was arrived at by South via the same sequence of bidding presented above. But the new West defender did not open the queen of clubs, leading the ace of hearts, instead. He then continued with a low heart, which South ruffed.

South next led a low trump toward's dummy's queen, and West captured the trick with his king. West now returned a third heart, dummy's queen being covered by East's king. On this trick South discarded his losing diamond.

East played back the ten of trumps, which South took with his ace. It was South's intention to lay down the ace of clubs, and then get to dummy via the trump queen in order to take a finesse in clubs against East's hoped-for queen. But, as is evident, he didn't have to take the finesse, for when he laid down the ace of clubs, he caught West's queen.

It was now a routine matter to lead a trump to dummy's queen, picking up West's last trump; and then to claim his contract, since he had no more losers in his hand.

Probe Urged Into City Gas Prices

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The provincial government should launch an investigation into why motorists in Victoria pay at least 5 cents more than those in Vancouver for a gallon of gasoline, Ald. Sam Bawlf said today.

"Victorians always seem to be subsidizing somebody else; we are always getting the short end of the stick."

He was commenting on a Times story Wednesday that showed gasoline prices as high as 67.9 in Victoria while the top price in Vancouver was 62.9 for the same product.

A Vancouver oil executive said transportation costs to the Island should add only 1 cent per gallon.

Ald. Bawlf, chairman of the transportation committee, said it was up to the provincial government to take some action because there was nothing city council could do.

"This is not a case of passing the buck. We do not have any authority over gasoline prices at the municipal level."

He said Victorians are "getting it in both ears" on the gasoline issue because the provincial government is using its 15 cent a gallon gas tax to subsidize car insurance rates in other areas. Victoria has the lowest car insurance rates in B.C. because of a low accident record but will lose this distinction through a new ICBC policy of charging a flat rate in all areas.

Meanwhile, the Victoria Chamber of Commerce said it plans an investigation into the gasoline price spread.

Chamber president Robert McHaffie said that if transportation costs amount to only 1 cent per gallon there is no justification for the present

JAWORSKI SEEKS TAPE DEADLINE

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Special prosecutor Leon Jaworski, moving swiftly after receiving a Supreme Court victory, asked a federal court today to compel President Nixon to begin delivering subpoenaed tape recordings within two days.

Jaworski asked the court to order that Nixon deliver 20 tapes within two days, 21 tapes within six days and the remainder within 10 days.

Nixon pledged Wednesday to comply fully with the court's decision ordering him to turn the tapes over to Judge John J. Sirica.

The president expressed disappointment in the ruling but said, "I respect and accept the court's decision."

Presidential counsel James St. Clair said that he would undertake the "time-consuming" job of readying the tapes but that it might be some weeks before he could hand them over to Judge Sirica.

Nixon Defenders Failing in Fight

WASHINGTON — The House of Representatives judiciary committee today heard a Republican plead for fairness to President Nixon and a Democrat urge his ouster for "open and notorious defiance of the law."

Opening the second round of the televised debate, Representatives Charles Wiggins (Rep. Calif.) said Nixon "is entitled to a presumption of innocence."

The second speaker, Representative John Conyers (Dem. Mich.) countered that Nixon must be removed from office "to restore to our government the proper balance of constitutional power and serve notice to all future presidents that such abuse of conduct . . . never again be tolerated."

Nixon's defenders on the committee chipped away today at what they termed "minimal and inadequate" impeachment evidence, but they apparently failed to budge Democrats and swing Republicans prepared to vote in favor of Nixon's removal from office.

One Republican, Hamilton Fish Jr., of New York, refused to commit himself on the impeachment vote but said he was "deeply troubled over the evidence of presidential complicity."

Wiggins, Nixon's chief defender on the committee, argued that out of more than 40 books of evidence studied in the impeachment inquiry, "you could put all the admissible evidence (against Nixon) in half of one book."

Conyers, one of the outspoken Nixon critics on the committee, said the president was responsible for "wholesale violation of the constitutional rights of citizens."

He also criticized Nixon's refusal to comply with the committee's subpoenas, saying:

"Unto this day the president is in open and notorious defiance of the law because he has failed to comply with the directives of this committee to produce the documents that we needed . . ."

If the committee approves impeachment in a vote expected this weekend, then the full House must decide whether to send the matter to the Senate for trial.

The committee opened its debate Wednesday night and heard Representative Charles Sandman (Rep. N.J.) say:

"There are sufficient votes here for an impeachment resolution."

"Everyone knows that," he said. "There is no use kidding ourselves about it."

That schedule suffered a slight setback Wednesday night when a bomb scare forced a 47-minute delay.

The threat, telephoned to the Capitol switchboard, forced Rodino to empty the packed room while police searched fruitlessly.

Later, after Rodino had recessed the proceedings for the night and the hearing room had almost emptied, a second bomb threat was received. Again nothing was found.

Naming The Names

SEATTLE (AP) — A spokesman for two environmental and recreation groups has proposed naming oil spills after politicians.

Douglas Scott, a spokesman for the Sierra Club and the Federation of Western Outdoor Clubs, issued a statement Wednesday after testimony at a coast guard hearing indicated that a tanker carrying nearly 10 million gallons of crude oil narrowly missed running aground near Anacortes last year. (See also Page 14.)

"Our modest proposal," Scott said, "is that each spill, like a hurricane, have a name — the name of a state legislator who votes in favor of bringing big oil tankers into Puget Sound."

Convict Holds 12

HUNTSVILLE, Tex. (UPI) — A desperado wanted for 50 murders in the United States and Mexico held 12 hostages in the state prison today and vowed to kill them if his demands for freedom were not met.

Three other inmates were with him, two of them fellow Mexican-Americans apparently helping in the escape attempt.

Prison officials said they had no intention of meeting the demands, and Warden Hal Husbands early today broke off talks with the leader, Fred Gomez Carrasco, 34.

Carrasco, armed with three .38-calbre revolvers, ordered bedding, food, pillows, water, aspirin and a bottle of liquid antacid sent to his fortress in a classroom of the prison library.

The hostages, eight of them women, were four librarians, six instructors, a prison guard and a Catholic chaplain, the Rev. Joseph O'Brien. The status of the fourth prisoner was unclear, but appeared to be an inmate hostage.

B.C. May Move Welfare Jobless

A plan to relocate welfare recipients to areas of B.C. where jobs are available is being considered by the provincial government, Human Resources Minister Norman Levi said Wednesday.

The policy will be clarified in the fall, said Levi, who was speaking on a taped television show to be broadcast Sunday night on Channel 6.

Today the proposal was given tentative support from two other cabinet ministers and was welcomed by Victoria-area municipal spokesmen and some members of the community.

Levi said his department had been examining the problem of unemployment and welfare for two months and will discuss methods of dealing with it in a meeting with Canada Manpower.

The minister was reacting to the recent action of Surrey and Coquitlam in removing about 90 single, able-bodied persons from the welfare roll, and said his philosophy was that able-bodied persons must work.

In outlining how the proposal might work, Levi said: "I think that we're going to have to prescribe certain areas in terms of low employability and say to people: 'If you stay in this area you have a limited amount of possibility to get welfare and then you must move on to an area where there is employment.'"

He added: "This business of moving people from where they prefer to live . . . to areas where there's a shortage of employment — that's one of the things we're going to have to tackle."

A pilot program of setting up such a program in B.C., is being undertaken by a large company, he said. Only families have been considered so far and they would be moved to an area where jobs and housing are waiting for them. He would not elaborate.

The biggest employment problem today is that of single persons in the 16-24 age group, who have few job skills and who might be helped by and who might be helped by training and retraining programs, the minister indicated.

But Levi noted the Surrey and Coquitlam action had not worked. He said those areas still lack pickers needed by berry farmers, although that was one employment opportunity cited by the municipalities in support of reducing the welfare roll.

Levi believes Surrey and Coquitlam acted illegally in violation of the federal-provincial agreement on the Canada Assistance Plan. This provides for 50 per cent of welfare costs paid by Ottawa, 40 per cent by the province and 10 per cent by municipalities, and unilateral action by a municipality is not permitted.

B.C. will take no action until the end of summer when the effect of the cutback will be assessed.

But if the municipal action has not been effective, Ottawa can sever its payments and the province can stop pay-

Cod Ruling for U.K.

THE HAGUE (AP) — The International Court of Justice decided by a 10-4 vote today that Iceland cannot unilaterally exclude British fishing vessels from the area between 12 and 60 nautical miles off its coast.

OOPS! THERE WENT 3,700 YEARS . . .

OTTAWA (CP) — It's enough to give an electronic calculator indigestion, but Canada lost more than 37 centuries worth of work in just one month this year because of work stoppages.

That's not quite how the labor department reported statistics for May Wednesday, but it's how the figures work out arithmetically.

The total May loss in man-days — the amount of work one man does in one — was 1,365,870, compared with 619,740 in April and 523,920 in May, 1973.

Divide 1,365,870 by 365, the number of days in a non-leap year, and the answer is 3,742.1 man-years. Divide that by 100, and the answer is 37.42 man-centuries.

Pint and a Chat At Prairie Inn

Central Saanich's historic Prairie Inn may ring again with the clink of beer glasses and the zing of darts.

The Inn will probably house the first neighborhood pub approved for the Greater Victoria area under new provincial legislation.

Central Saanich council subdivision and zoning committee will recommend to council next week that the application by the Inn's owners, Gavin and Bev Harper, be approved.

The Harpers have already started the mandatory canvass of neighbors within a six-block radius of the proposed pub site and so far the reaction has been good.

"A fellow called me this morning to ask why I hadn't gone back to his place because there were three people there who wanted to sign in favor of the pub," Bev Harper said today.

The pub could open up within two months, she said, and will have one room with a bar, tables and standing room, another room with a fireplace and tables which will be the "quiet place" and facilities for musical entertainment and dancing.

Cribbage boards will also be provided for customers, she said.

The Inn was built in 1893, the year the Victoria and Sidney Railway went through the area, and was the first pub on the Saanich Peninsula.

Ottawa Bomb Scare Real

Times News Services

OTTAWA — A bomb device "big enough to do a lot of damage" was safely removed from a city shopping mall here last Wednesday but a search for another bomb three hours later produced nothing.

The device, found inside a shoe box in a tree planter used to decorate Bank Street mall. It was situated about 10 to 15 feet from RCMP A-Division headquarters and was discovered by an officer reporting for night duty.

Police said an officer protected by a shield opened the shoe box to find a tangle of wires and two squat cylindrical devices which contained black powder.

The threat which fizzled came at 2:35 a.m. and sent police on a fruitless search. Police said they had no clues in either incident.

Turks Back Down

Times News Services

A threatened clash between Turkish and United Nations troops over control of Nicosia airport was averted today with a pledge from Turkey not to use force to try to eject the UN soldiers.

A contingent of 500 British troops in armored cars was reported on its way to the airport from British bases in south Cyprus to bolster the UN force. Britain was flying a squadron of 12 Phantom jets to the island because of what the British defence ministry called the "tense situation."

Canadian troops on Cyprus have been moved back from the airport at Nicosia to their old job of patrolling the Green Line between Greek and Turkish-Cypriot positions.

The 100 Canadians have been replaced by British troops.

Defence Minister James Richardson made the announcement in Ottawa today in advance of cabinet consideration of a UN request for more Canadian troops.

Fighting on the troubled island died out today, but Turkish troops still surrounded a tiny UN contingent holding the battered remains of Nicosia airport.

One UN officer said Greek anti-aircraft emplacements were on the perimeter of the airport and Turkish troops surrounded it.

Canadian troops played a major role in the takeover of the airport, which was a mess after the ceasefire quieted most of the fighting between Greeks and Turks.

Turkish Foreign Minister Turan Gunes, however, arrived in Geneva today for Cyprus peace talks with his British and Greek counterparts and said prospects for a settlement are good.

"The conference is starting with a good omen," Gunes said in French when he landed at Geneva Airport. "We have conference partners in the Greek government of Constantine Caramanlis who are well known in Turkey."

It is expected that the ministers will meet for about three days, adopt a communique supporting the ceasefire and create a working group.

One of Premier Caramanlis's first acts after naming a 12-man cabinet Wednesday was to declare a general amnesty for all those jailed for political dissent during the seven years of military dictatorship.

The new government emptied the Yiaros Island concentration camp and shut it down.

India Joining Race

NEW DELHI (UPI) — India will join the space race within the next four years, Prime Minister Indira Gandhi said Wednesday. "The first orbital flight is scheduled to take place in 1978," Mrs. Gandhi said in a written reply to a question from parliament. She gave no further details.

Obscene Mule-Riders Beware at Thetis

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

If, in a mood of gay abandon, you feel the urge to gallop your "horse, mule or ass" on the beach at Thetis Lake Park, the while emitting "offensive noises" or hurling "obscene or insulting" remarks at sunbathers, before cooling off with a quick skinny dip in the lake . . . resist the impulse.

The general prohibition on such whimsical frolics already stands on the city's statute book, in the form of the parks bylaw, but a bylaw scheduled for introduction at today's city council meeting seeks to make the no-no's more specific in their application to Thetis Lake.

City solicitor Jakob de Villiers says as the city can normally legislate only within its geographical boundaries, it had to obtain a special act of the legislature in 1962 to legislate for Thetis Lake Park, and at that time the city's parks bylaw was amended to incorporate such provisions.

But now it is felt that the special topographical and other features of the semi-wilderness park should be recognized with a separate set of rules and regulations from those governing its formal city cousins.

For instance, the draft bylaw for Thetis Lake includes sections dealing with the ticket machine at the park entrance, and the mandatory displaying of 25-cent parking tickets on vehicle dashboards.

There are, too, other interesting differences between the proposed new bylaw and the old catch-all statute.

The Thetis Lake bylaw would ban any dogs in the park unless they are "kept on a leash or carried within the arms" of their owners at all times. (Leash-less owners of St. Bernards and Great Danes be warned — that could be a tiring walk!)

But the general parks bylaw is more sweeping in its proscription of all two-and four-legged creatures: "No person as owner or having the control of any animal or fowl shall suffer or permit such animal or fowl to run at large . . ."

Fowl aren't mentioned in the Thetis Lake rules, so presumably one could saunter along the trails with one's tame duck waddling behind.

Then there's the whole question of public behavior and decency.

Under this general heading the Thetis Lake bylaw would insist, among other provisions, that no one "undress

A World That's Unknown Confronted at Long Last

It's years and years too late, mind you, but the study of what's loosely called "The Third World" is soon to be a part of the social studies curriculum in British Columbia schools. Tardy though it is, I'm enthusiastic about the approach to it.

I have on my desk the first draft of a teachers' manual that will be used as an introduction to the subject. It is very, very good. For one thing it was not prepared by any glib or theorizing expert but is a two-year labor of love by a group of 30 practicing, practical teachers who were bank-rolled by various government and private agencies.

They are almost painfully aware, as they should be, of the need to start from scratch, that the ignorance in Canada of the poverty-stricken two-thirds of our world is all but total.

I could wish for stronger judgments on the moral and political questions, but those are conclusions that the students will reach by a study of the evidence and perhaps that is the best way.

The conditions of life in Latin-America, in Africa, in India, Pakistan and Bangladesh, in those exploited, plundered corners of the world where humanity is the first expendable, need to be recognized by Canadians at every level. We've a chance for leadership in that Third World. Many of our more responsible leaders have recognized it. But we've been denied that role simply because Canadians simply do not know or, seemingly, care about the truth of it.

It is not a world in which progress comes as a natural growth. As it is now the only hope for change seems to be in violence, in an all but inevitable clash between rich and poor, oppressed and oppressors.

The manual quotes President Nyerere, of Tanzania, in what we need to know most. "Both nationally and internationally this division of mankind into a tiny minority of rich and a great majority of poor is rapidly becoming intolerable to the majority, as it should be," Nyerere observed. "The poor nations and the poor peoples of the world are already in rebellion. If they do not succeed in securing a change which leads towards greater justice, then that rebellion will become an explosion."

That prophecy and its dreadful consequences, described by one statesman as "the most imperative debate of our time," can only be averted if the people and the leaders of the one-third of the world that enjoys affluence move quickly to share their wealth. We need to know of the new kind of economic materialism that's replaced the old-fashioned colonialism and perpetuated the illiteracy, the hunger, the deep poverty and the hate that lie just across every horizon.

Again, President Nyerere has put it in the most explicit terms: "The significance about this division between rich and poor is not simply that one man has more food than he can eat, more clothes than he can wear, and more houses than he can live in, while others are hungry, unclad or homeless. The reality and the depth of the problem arises because the man who is rich has power over the lives of those who are poor, and the rich nation has power over the policies of those who are not rich. And even more important is that a social and economic system, nationally and internationally, supports these divisions and constantly increases them so that the rich get ever richer and more powerful, while the poor get relatively ever poorer and less able to control their own future."

I believe now that this can only be learned by young people who study it in school and that we will have to wait for the next generation to achieve that awareness.

This, at any rate, was the sad lesson learned by Ralph Allen, who was far and away the greatest Canadian editor of them all. Allen, as editor of the Toronto Star, had become fed up with the slanted reports of American wire agency correspondents in Latin America. When he decided to appoint the first resident Canadian correspondent in the southern hemisphere I had the great good luck to win the assignment.

★ ★ ★

We shared in the kudos that followed this decision and certainly, for me, the two years in Rio de Janeiro and Buenos Aires were an education. All we lacked was readership. Time after time the Star's surveys showed that subscribers would avidly read about a violent death in Etobicoke, for example, but could not be induced to read about six million people dying of malnutrition in the northeast of Brazil.

It was Allen's theory that Canadians simply could not understand or relate to the kind of soul-destroying poverty that afflicts two-thirds of our world.

We have, by definition, the "poor", but we simply can't imagine what it's like to literally starve. Allen, himself, could see no way to bridge this gap.

The teachers' manual notes, "we should be outraged at the injustice of underdevelopment" and quotes a World Council of Churches conclusion that "it would be wrong for every North American child to have an electric toothbrush before every Latin American child has a daily bottle of milk." But newspaper coverage alone for an adult reader obviously was not the answer.

My hope now is that the gap may be closed by presenting the facts to the more receptive minds of students and that the various teaching devices outlined in the manual may help to bring home an awareness of the way things really are.

One such device calls upon the students to imagine what life might be like living on less than $100 a year, the average income in that Third World. That is terribly difficult. Can a Canadian really visualize what it is like for the 250,000 people of Calcutta who live in the streets or the 40,000 Columbians who occupy the shack-town in Cali without water, sanitation or electric light or a life expectancy of 40 years?

At least is is a bold, if long-delayed, start toward that basic understanding and if it works at all it may just be the most important lesson they'll ever learn.

Ex-Butcher Gets Fine For Tax Trim

A former Oak Bay meat market owner was fined a total of $3,514.35 in provincial court today for evading income tax and making false statements on his tax returns.

George Slater, 61, former operator of Slater's First Class Meats at 2577 Cadboro Bay, had earlier pleaded guilty to a four-count charge under the Income Tax Act.

Judge R. B. Allan of Nelson, presiding in a Victoria court section during the holiday of another judge, imposed fines just $150 over the minimum.

Slater had been charged with making false statements on his tax returns for the years 1970 through 1972 and evading taxes of $10,830 by failing to report income of $34,123 over those years.

When the case first appeared before Judge William Ostler, the judge said he had known the accused for "a substantial period in his role as a tradesman" and transferred the case to Allan's court.

Federal tax investigator G. G. Barras told the court earlier that a routine audit was under way at the meat market last August when Slater "told our auditor he had not reported all of his income."

Investigation revealed sales of $300 a week had not been reported.

Slater paid $8,979 in taxes on income he originally declared in the three years. Penalties and other assessments had since increased what he owed to $31,799.

The Slaters had received legal advice that Mrs. Slater could work in the store but should not be paid a salary, defence counsel Louis Lindholm told the court. Had the business been incorporated, total taxes could have been legally reduced to $13,182.

Slater's store was sold last September for $25,000 plus stock and court was told that Slater is not in good health and cannot take a full-time job.

Judge Allan said today there were mitigating circumstances in the case and he had taken into account testimony on Slater's good character, his admission of wrong doing to authorities and his co-operation with them.

Had Slater been familiar with tax law he could have legally avoided much of the tax assessed against him, the judge said.

Character witnesses Wednesday included Oak Bay Mayor Brian Smith, like Ostler a former customer, who told the court the store had provided "absolutely top service."

Jack Elliott, 80, of 305 King George, a former magistrate in the Sooke-Jordan River area, told the court he had found Slater a first-class citizen.

Judge Allan noted that Slater has paid all taxes and penalties owing and has already suffered "a severe penal consequence of his act."

Developer Seeks Views On Inner Harbor Site

Vancouver developer Ben Wosk said during a visit to Victoria Wednesday he is trying to "get the feel" of what the provincial government and city of Victoria would like to see constructed on Inner Harbor waterfront.

He said he is among a number of people who have expressed interest in harbor property, upon which the province has clapped a development freeze between Laurel Point and Johnson Street bridge.

Wednesday he had an informal meeting with Lands, Forests and Water Resources Minister Bob Williams, whose department represents provincial government interest in the frontage. He met previously with officials at city hall.

Wosk's main interests in Vancouver are as owner of a large furniture retail organization and developer of hotels. He indicated his interests here might be along commercial and accommodation lines.

But he said there was no point in talking about proposals in detail until he learned what the two levels of government — which control the type and extent of development — have in mind for the areas of waterfront formerly occupied by Bapco Paint (Laurel Point) and industrial buildings along the northeast shore adjoining the downtown business sector.

The province has been sitting on an architectural-planning report from former city planner Roderick Clack, now assistant general manager and planning director of the National Capital Commission which loaned his services for the purpose.

His recommendations have not been disclosed by Williams, who is chairman of the government's land-use committee, but Clack has said he did not urge establishment of a provincial capital commission to steer harbor development.

The province is one of the biggest land owners on the waterfront, having purchased the Wharf Street property of developer John Reid for $1.7 million after the city approved its sale to Commonwealth Holiday Inns of Canada Ltd.

Land Plan 'Comedy Of Errors'

The provincial government's agricultural land reserve plan for southern Vancouver Island was labelled "a comedy of errors" by the Capital Regional District board Wednesday.

Directors complained that the regional district put in months of work recommending what land should be reserved for farming, only to find some farming land excluded and some non-farming land included in the plan set down by the B.C. land commission.

"This is just damn nonsense. Let them come forth and explain," said Victoria Ald. Alf Hood.

His motion to request land commission members to attend a regional board meeting to explain anomalies was unanimously endorsed.

"They scuttled everything," said Central Saanich Mayor Jean Butler who added she could go on for several hours pinpointing errors.

"It's a schemozzle," said Victoria Ald. Tom Christie.

"It's a comedy of errors. It's just unbelievable. Shocking," said Saanich Ald. Fred (Whitey) Severson.

Regional board chairman Jim Campbell said the land commission "included quite a large amount" of land which is not agricultural. Parts of some Indian reserves were included and some were excluded from the plan without regard to soil classifications.

"We are entitled to some form of explanation from the land commissioin," he said.

Sooke director Ron Dumont asked that a bylaw be prepared, covering his whole electoral area, to provide for a 10-acre subdivision minimum because "a great amount of farmland has been released from the land freeze."

NEW CENTRE FOR DROPOUTS

The Boys' Club of Greater Victoria has established a centre in Royal Oak which will be used by 20 teenaged dropouts when the program doubles in size in September.

The boys will move into the Royal Oak Scout Hall in September, as long as the federal government comes through with the necessary budget increases, club director Tony Gascoyne said today. He said he expects the increased funds to be granted.

The club's application to use the top floor of the former Royal Oak Hospital in Saanich as a centre was turned down last week by Saanich council in favor of a group of artists who had applied to use the hospital site first.

Gascoyne said Saanich council members had arranged for a meeting between the club and the Scout executive committee and that negotiations have now been completed.

The Royal Oak hall would be a sub-centre to the main centre on Yates Street, Gascoyne said.

The club is also looking for a suitable facility in the Burnside-Tillicum area to use as a similar sub-centre.

If the site for the second sub-centre is found, the club would be doubling the number of boys it can handle.

"We want to up our number from 40 to 80 boys and even if we get the 80 we won't be able to handle all the applications we have," he said.

The boys' club is provided with teachers from the Victoria school district to help with the academic work. The boys also work outside, maintaining the grounds at the G. R. Pearkes Clinic for Handicapped Children, and cutting and selling firewood.

Gascoyne said the club was establishing the sub-centres rather than housing all 80 boys in one place because "it was the numbers and competitiveness that drove many of these boys out of the regular schools in the first place and we don't want to repeat that."

The club is currently negotiating with the Saanich school board to set up a similar program in that district.

Gascoyne said the Peninsula program would be completely self-contained and separate from the Greater Victoria program.

The board considered the program at its last meeting but decided to put off any decision until its first August meeting, Gascoyne said.

"Even if it goes through, I wouldn't expect that program to be established much before Christmas."

Tennis Court Under Study For Oak Bay

Oak Bay aldermen and the Greater Victoria school board are exploring the feasibility of jointly developing a major tennis layout, possibly with a protective "bubble," behind Oak Bay junior secondary school.

Mayor Brian Smith said today that a meeting between representatives of both parties Wednesday evening produced "good co-operation" as costs and ways the project might be handled were discussed.

School board chairman Peter Bunn said today trustees are dedicated to community sharing of school facilities but there is much to be settled before the tennis proposal could be realized.

Smith said two proposals are under consideration with one being a four-court layout covered by a plastic bubble in winter to provide year-round play. Such bubbles, now in use at several locations on the Lower Mainland, are portable, can be put up in a day, and cost about $150,000.

Both Bunn and Smith are enthused about the prospect of a major tennis teaching layout because they point out tennis is a lifetime sport, unlike many others played in school.

Tennis is also reputedly the fastest-growing sport on the continent.

Smith said council and the board will meet again on the subject. If it goes ahead, applications for grants will be made to both provincial and federal governments.

Bunn said one of the problems with the Oak Bay junior site is lack of land. There are only 7.6 acres at the school site when there should be 13 acres.

He said one thing needed now is a mini-seminar of school physical and education teachers to thrash out merits of the idea.

If they favor more development of sports which students can continue after leaving school such as tennis, it could mean a turn-around in the physical education curriculum, he said.

ARSON CHARGED

Arnold Gordon Mason, 42, was charged with arson in Victoria provincial court today after a fire in his home at 3330 Happy Valley early this morning.

Mason was remanded to Aug. 1 for election of trial method and plea.

There were no occupants in the small home when fire broke out in the kitchen about 4:55 a.m., causing about $19,000 damage, Colwood RCMP report.

Truck Foes Called Selfish

A group of Cordova Bay residents who want heavy truck traffic out of their area have adopted a "selfish attitude and only want to get the problem off their road and on to someone else's" Saanich Ald. William Noel said today.

Noel said alderman and staff had been working on the problem, "but it can't happen overnight."

The residents say they are primarily concerned about the noise made by the cement and dump trucks which drive along Cordova Bay Road from a gravel pit near Mattick's Farm on Cordova Bay.

Susan Lazaruk, 4900 Cordova Bay Road, said the noise from the trucks was "nerve-racking."

She said tests had been done on the noise level, showing it to be about 45 decibels when the trucks were not going through and between 80 and 90 decibels when they were.

The residents protested to Saanich council in February about the truck traffic and said the safety of their children was involved. Council at that time lowered the speed limit from 30 to 25 miles per hour.

The residents have written another letter to council asking for a meeting to talk about the problem and have threatened to get a supreme court injunction to stop the trucks if they do not get the meeting

They have also discussed setting up a barricade of baby buggies if they can't get the injunction.

Noel said the residents would probably be asked to attend the next public works committee meeting Aug. 13.

"We have not been idle on this," Noel said. "We have discussed alternatives to the route along Cordova Bay and the only answer may involve buying a piece of property to realign Cordova Bay Road where it meets the Pat Bay highway."

Noel said the trucks were only a half mile from the highway, but that Cordova Bay Road goes down too steep a grade where it meets the highway for the trucks to cope with.

"It's a safety thing. These trucks are heavily loaded and all it would take would be one failure of brakes on that steep grade down to the highway. If a bus was coming along the highway we could have a terrible accident and we just don't want to risk that."

Clarence Rossner, 5065 Cordova Bay, and another member of the group, said they had asked council in February for sidewalks and crosswalks in the area, but that nothing had been done.

Pub Plan Support Sought

Proponents of a neighborhood pub in the city's Fernwood area are seeking neighborhood support today while in Oak Bay aldermen continue to worry about potential traffic problems from a pub proposed there.

The Fernwood pub, suggested by Ron Spence, president of the Fernwood Community association, would offer a "quiet, controlled family atmosphere," says a circular distributed to about 2,000 area residents — a place "where people can congregate and relax in a local and friendly atmosphere."

Under new liquor regulations, residents within a six-block radius of the proposed pub site must be polled for their views.

"There's a few people who don't want alcohol on their front doorsteps," said Spence of reaction he's received to date. "But quite often, after the plan is explained, they turn into the strongest supporters. There are others who are quite positive about the idea."

The pub application of Mr. and Mrs. Gaston Godbout of 203 Beechwood came before another council committee in Oak Bay Wednesday evening and again aldermen expressed concern about parking.

The Godbouts want to open a pub at 2024 Oak Bay Avenue where aldermen noted there would be room for 100 patrons but parking for only five cars.

Gas Stations Twig to No-Lead Fuel

A survey of service stations in greater Victoria Wednesday indicates about one in three this fall will be selling unleaded gasoline, the fuel needed by some new model cars.

Gas without lead is the only kind which can be used in the new model cars equipped with catalytic converters which will appear this fall.

Catalytic converters are muffler-like pollution control devices worth about $150. Just two tankfuls of leaded gas will clog them so badly they have to be replaced.

But auto industry spokesmen say cars with the converters, apart from producing less pollution, should give enough improved mileage to offset the extra cost in about three years. And unleaded gas should be as cheap or slightly cheaper than leaded gas.

General Motors has indicated most of its new models will have the catalytic converters and other major car makers say some of their models will as well.

A cross-Canada survey by the federal industry department indicates more than 5,000 service stations, about one in every five brand name outlets, will provide unleaded gas by Oct. 1.

Ron Baldwin, field representative for the automotive Retailers Association of B.C., also estimated about one-third of gas stations in Victoria and Vancouver will serve unleaded gas this fall.

A spokesman for Imperial Oil Ltd. said in Vancouver that while only two of the company's stations are now selling unleaded gas, 127 will be later in the year, eight of them in Greater Victoria.

Shell Canada Ltd. has 200 stations throughout the province now selling unleaded gas and the other 200 stations will be by the end of the year. Of about 40 stations in Greater Victoria, most are already selling it.

Spokesmen for Woodwards, Union 76 and Mohawk Oil service stations in the city report they've heard of no plans to install the special pumping equipment for unleaded gas. They said individual oil companies make that decision.

An example of the cost involved in adding unleaded gas was given by Al Kubicek of Al's Home Service, 3201 Douglas.

He said it involves spending $26,000 to $30,000 to put in a separate 3,000-gallon tank together with three separate pumps on three islands to serve the new cars.

"That way we get our cost recovery," he said.

The new cars with catalytic converters will have a special narrow-necked filler line to their gas tanks, too small to take the nozzle on the regular pumps for leaded gas.

This feature, designed to prevent leaded gas being accidentally pumped into them, means the new pumps handling unleaded gas require new narrow nozzles.

Police Seek Witnesses In Stabbing

Victoria police are requesting help from the public in locating witnesses to a stabbing at Fernwood and Pandora sometime between 2:30 and 3 p.m. Wednesday.

Christopher Fuller, 23, of 776 Dominion, was stabbed twice in the left shoulder as he walked near the intersection.

Police said he was stabbed after three "well-dressed men in their early 20s" drove up in a turquoise 1966 Comet, got out and attacked him.

Police believe there were three of four people in the area who might have seen the incident.

Fuller is in fair condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital today.

B.C. May Move Welfare Jobless

A plan to relocate welfare recipients to areas of B.C. where jobs are available is being considered by the provincial government, Human Resources Minister Norman Levi said Wednesday.

The policy will be clarified in the fall, said Levi, who was speaking on a taped television show to be broadcast Sunday night on Channel 6.

Today the proposal was given tentative support from two other cabinet ministers and was welcomed by Victoria-area municipal spokesmen and some members of the community.

Levi said his department had been examining the problem of unemployment and welfare for two months and will discuss methods of dealing with it in a meeting with Canada Manpower.

The minister was reacting to the recent action of Surrey and Coquitlam in removing about 90 single, able-bodied persons from the welfare roll, and said his philosophy was that able-bodied persons must work.

In outlining how the proposal might work, Levi said: "I think that we're going to have proscribe certain areas in terms of low employability and say to people: 'If you stay in this area you have a limited amount of possibility to get welfare and then you must move on to an area where there is employment.'"

He added: "This business of moving people from where they prefer to live . . . to areas where there's a shortage of employment — that's one of the things we're going to have to tackle."

A pilot program of setting up such a program in B.C., is being undertaken by a large company, he said. Only families have been considered so far and they would be moved to an area where jobs and housing are waiting for them. He would not elaborate.

The biggest employment problem today is that of single persons in the 16-24 age group, who have few job skills and who might be helped by training and retraining programs, the minister indicated.

But Levi noted the Surrey and Coquitlam action had not worked. He said those areas still lack pickers needed by berry farmers, although that was one employment opportunity cited by the municipalities in support of reducing the welfare roll.

Levi believes Surrey and Coquitlam acted illegally in violation of the federal-provincial agreement on the Canada Assistance Plan. This provides for 50 per cent of welfare costs paid by Ottawa, 40 per cent by the province and 10 per cent by municipalities, and unilateral action by a municipality is not permitted.

B.C. will take no action until the end of summer when the effect of the cutback will be assessed.

But if the municipal action has not been effective, Ottawa can sever its payments and the province can stop pay-

Probe Urged Into City Gas Prices

By AL FORREST

The provincial government should launch an investigation into why motorists in Victoria pay at least 5 cents more than those in Vancouver for a gallon of gasoline, Ald. Sam Bawlf said today.

"Victorians always seem to be subsidizing somebody else; we are always getting the short end of the stick."

He was commenting on a Times story Wednesday that showed gasoline prices as high as 67.9 in Victoria while the top price in Vancouver was 62.9 for the same product.

A Vancouver oil executive said transportation costs to the Island should add only 1 cent per gallon.

Ald. Bawlf, chairman of the transportation committee, said it was up to the provincial government to take some action because there was nothing city council could do.

"This is not a case of passing the buck. We do not have any authority over gasoline prices at the municipal level."

He said Victorians are "getting it in both ears" on the gasoline issue because the provincial government is using its 15 cent a gallon gas tax to subsidize car insurance rates in other areas. Victoria has the lowest car insurance rates in B.C. because of a low accident record but will lose this distinction through a new ICBC policy of charging a flat rate in all areas.

Meanwhile, the Victoria Chamber of Commerce said it plans an investigation into the gasoline price spread.

Chamber president Robert McHaffie said that if transportation costs amount to only 1 cent per gallon there is no justification for the present

Naming The Names

SEATTLE (AP) — A spokesman for two environmental and recreation groups has proposed naming oil spills after politicians.

Douglas Scott, a spokesman for the Sierra Club and the Federation of Western Outdoor Clubs, issued a statement Wednesday after testimony at a coast guard hearing indicated that a tanker carrying nearly 10 million gallons of crude oil narrowly missed running aground near Anacortes last year. (See also Page 14.)

"Our modest proposal," Scott said, "is that each spill, like a hurricane, have a name — the name of a state legislator who votes in favor of bringing big oil tankers into Puget Sound."

Convict Holds 12

HUNTSVILLE, Tex. (UPI) — A desperado wanted for 50 murders in the United States and Mexico held 12 hostages in the state prison today and vowed to kill them if his demands for freedom were not met.

Three other inmates were with him, two of them fellow Mexican-Americans apparently helping in the escape attempt.

Prison officials said they had no intention of meeting the demands, and Warden Hal Husbands early today broke off talks with the leader, Fred Gomez Carrasco, 34.

Carrasco, armed with three .38-calbre revolvers, ordered bedding, food, pillows, water, aspirin and a bottle of liquid antacid sent to his fortress in a classroom of the prison library.

The hostages, eight of them women, were four librarians, six instructors, a prison guard and a Catholic chaplain, the Rev. Joseph O'Brien. The status of the fourth prisoner was unclear, but appeared to be an inmate hostage.

Ottawa Bomb Scare Real

Times News Services

OTTAWA — A bomb device "big enough to do a lot of damage" was safely removed from a city shopping mall here last Wednesday but a search for another bomb three hours later produced nothing.

The device, found inside a shoe box in a tree planter was used to decorate Bank Street mall. It was situated about 10 to 15 feet from RCMP A-Division headquarters and was discovered by an officer reporting for night duty.

Police said an officer protected by a shield opened the shoe box to find a tangle of wires and two squat cylindrical devices which contained black powder.

The threat which fizzled came at 2:35 a.m. and sent police on a fruitless search. Police said they had no clues in either incident.

Cyprus Force Hiked

Times News Services

OTTAWA—External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said today Canada will double its troop strength in Cyprus, as requested by United Nations Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim.

Sharp told reporters that Canada will increase the number of Canadian soldiers from 487 men to 950.

But he said he considered the increase in troops "a temporary measure" and said it would be reviewed when Canada reviews its participation in the Cyprus force on Dec. 15.

He said the Canadian soldiers could be on Cyprus within four days.

Meanwhile, a threatened clash between Turkish and United Nations troops over control of Nicosia airport was averted today with a pledge from Turkey not to use force to try to eject the UN soldiers.

A contingent of 500 British troops in armored cars was reported on its way to the airport from British bases in south Cyprus to bolster the UN force. Britain was flying a squadron of 12 Phantom jets to the island because of what the British defence ministry called the "tense situation."

Canadian troops on Cyprus have been moved back from the airport at Nicosia to their old job of patrolling the Green Line between Greek and Turkish-Cypriot positions.

The 100 Canadians have been replaced by British troops.

Fighting on the troubled island died out today, but Turkish troops still surrounded a tiny UN contingent holding the battered remains of Nicosia airport.

One UN officer said Greek anti-aircraft emplacements were on the perimeter of the airport and Turkish troops surrounded it.

Canadian troops played a major role in the takeover of the airport, which was a mess after the ceasefire quieted most of the fighting between Greeks and Turks.

Turkish Foreign Minister Turan Gunes, however, arrived in Geneva today for Cyprus peace talks with his British and Greek counterparts and said prospects for a settlement are good.

"The conference is starting with a good omen," Gunes said in French when he landed at Geneva Airport. "We have conference partners in the Greek government of Constantine Caramanlis who are well known in Turkey."

It is expected that the ministers will meet for about three days, adopt a communique supporting the ceasefire and create a working group.

JAWORSKI SEEKS TAPE DEADLINE

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Special prosecutor Leon Jaworski, moving swiftly after receiving a Supreme Court victory, asked a federal court today to compel President Nixon to begin delivering subpoenaed tape recordings within two days.

Jaworski asked the court to order that Nixon deliver 20 tapes within two days, 21 tapes within six days and the remainder within 10 days.

Nixon pledged Wednesday to comply fully with the court's decision ordering him to turn the tapes over to Judge John J. Sirica.

The president expressed disappointment in the ruling but said, "I respect and accept the court's decision."

Presidential counsel James St. Clair said that he would undertake the "time-consuming" job of readying the tapes but that it might be some weeks before he could hand them over to Judge Sirica.

Nixon Defenders Failing in Fight

WASHINGTON — The House of Representatives judiciary committee today heard a Republican plead for fairness to President Nixon and a Democrat urge his ouster for "open and notorious defiance of the law."

Opening the second round of the televised debate, Representatives Charles Wiggins (Rep. Calif.) said Nixon "is entitled to a presumption of innocence."

The second speaker, Representative John Conyers (Dem. Mich.) countered that Nixon must be removed from office "to restore to our government the proper balance of constitutional power and serve notice to all future presidents that such abuse of conduct . . . never again be tolerated."

Nixon's defenders on the committee chipped away today at what they termed "minimal and inadequate" impeachment evidence, but they apparently failed to budge Democrats and swing Republicans prepared to vote in favor of Nixon's removal from office.

One Republican, Hamilton Fish Jr., of New York, refused to commit himself on the impeachment vote but said he was "deeply troubled over the evidence of presidential complicity."

Wiggins, Nixon's chief defender on the committee, argued that out of more than 40 books of evidence studied in the impeachment inquiry, "you could put all the admissible evidence (against Nixon) in half of one book."

Conyers, one of the outspoken Nixon critics on the committee, said the president was responsible for "wholesale violation of the constitutional rights of citizens."

He also criticized Nixon's refusal to comply with the committee's subpoenas, saying:

"Unto this day the president is in open and notorious defiance of the law because he has failed to comply with the directives of this committee to produce the documents that we needed . . ."

If the committee approves impeachment in a vote expected this weekend, then the full House must decide whether to send the matter to the Senate for trial.

The committee opened its debate Wednesday night and heard Representative Charles Sandman (Rep. N.J.) say:

"There are sufficient votes here for an impeachment resolution."

"Everyone knows that," he said. "There is no use kidding ourselves about it."

That schedule suffered a slight setback Wednesday night when a bomb scare forced a 47-minute delay.

The threat, telephoned to the Capitol switchboard, forced Rodino to empty the packed room while police searched fruitlessly.

Later, after Rodino had recessed the proceedings for the night and the hearing room had almost emptied, a second bomb threat was received. Again nothing was found.

Cod Ruling for U.K.

THE HAGUE (AP) — The International Court of Justice decided by a 10-4 vote today that Iceland cannot unilaterally exclude British fishing vessels from the area between 12 and 60 nautical miles off its coast.

OOPS! THERE WENT 3,700 YEARS . . .

OTTAWA (CP) — It's enough to give an electronic calculator indigestion, but Canada lost more than 37 centuries worth of work in just one month this year because of work stoppages.

That's not quite how the labor department reported statistics for May Wednesday, but it's how the figures work out arithmetically.

The total May loss in man-days — the amount of work one man does in one — was 1,365,870, compared with 619,740 in April and 523,920 in May, 1973.

Divide 1,365,870 by 365, the number of days in a non-leap year, and the answer is 3,742.1 man-years. Divide that by 100, and the answer is 37.42 man-centuries.

Pint and a Chat At Prairie Inn

Central Saanich's historic Prairie Inn may ring again with the clink of beer glasses and the zing of darts.

The Inn will probably house the first neighborhood pub approved for the Greater Victoria area under new provincial legislation.

Central Saanich council subdivision and zoning committee will recommend to council next week that the application by the Inn's owners, Gavin and Bev Harper, be approved.

The Harpers have already started the mandatory canvass of neighbors within a six-block radius of the proposed pub site and so far the reaction has been good.

"A fellow called me this morning to ask why I hadn't gone back to his place because there were three people there who wanted to sign in favor of the pub," Bev Harper said today.

The pub could open up within two months, she said, and will have one room with a bar, tables and standing room, another room with a fireplace and tables which will be the "quiet place" and facilities for musical entertainment and dancing.

Cribbage boards will also be provided for customers, she said.

The Inn was built in 1893, the year the Victoria and Sidney Railway went through the area, and was the first pub on the Saanich Peninsula.

For reports on neighborhood pub applications in Fernwood and Oak Bay, see Page 17.

India Joining Race

NEW DELHI (UPI) — India will join the space race within the next four years, Prime Minister Indira Gandhi said Wednesday. "The first orbital flight is scheduled to take place in 1978," Mrs. Gandhi said in a written reply to a question from parliament. She gave no further details.

Obscene Mule-Riders Beware at Thetis

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

If, in a mood of gay abandon, you feel the urge to gallop your "horse, mule or ass" on the beach at Thetis Lake Park, the while emitting "offensive noises" or hurling "obscene or insulting" remarks at sunbathers before cooling off with a quick skinny dip in the lake . . . resist the impulse.

The general prohibition on such whimsical frolics already stands on the city's statute book, in the form of the parks bylaw, but a bylaw scheduled for introduction at today's city council meeting seeks to make the no-no's more specific in their application to Thetis Lake.

City solicitor Jakob de Villiers says as the city can normally legislate only within its geographical boundaries, it had to obtain a special act of the legislature in 1962 to legislate for Thetis Lake Park, and at that time the city's parks bylaw was amended to incorporate such provisions.

But now it is felt that the special topographical and other features of the semi-wilderness park should be recognized with a separate set of rules and regulations from those governing its formal city cousins.

For instance, the draft bylaw for Thetis Lake includes sections dealing with the ticket machine at the park entrance, and the mandatory displaying of 25-cent parking tickets on vehicle dashboards.

There are, too, other interesting differences between the proposed new bylaw and the old catch-all statute.

The Thetis Lake bylaw would ban any dogs in the park unless they are "kept on a leash or carried within the arms" of their owners at all times. (Leash-less owners of St. Bernards and Great Danes be warned — that could be a tiring walk!)

But the general parks bylaw is more sweeping in its proscription of all two-and four-legged creatures: "No person as owner or having the control of any animal or fowl shall suffer or permit such animal or fowl to run at large . . ."

Fowl aren't mentioned in the Thetis Lake rules, so presumably one could saunter along the trails with one's tame duck waddling behind.

Then there's the whole question of public behavior and decency.

Under this general heading the Thetis Lake bylaw would insist, among other provisions, that no one "undress

"Unto this day the president is in open and notorious defiance of the law because he has failed to comply with the directives of this committee to produce the documents that we needed . . ."

If the committee approves impeachment in a vote expected this weekend, then the full House must decide whether to send the matter to the Senate for trial.

The committee opened its debate Wednesday night and heard Representative Charles Sandman (Rep. N.J.) say:

"There are sufficient votes here for an impeachment resolution."

"Everyone knows that," he said. "There is no use kidding ourselves about it."

That schedule suffered a slight setback Wednesday night when a bomb scare forced a 47-minute delay.

The threat, telephoned to the Capitol switchboard, forced Rodino to empty the packed room while police searched fruitlessly.

Later, after Rodino had recessed the proceedings for the night and the hearing room had almost emptied, a second bomb threat was received. Again nothing was found.

Naming The Names

SEATTLE (AP) — A spokesman for two environmental and recreation groups has proposed naming oil spills after politicians.

Douglas Scott, a spokesman for the Sierra Club and the Federation of Western Outdoor Clubs, issued a statement Wednesday after testimony at a coast guard hearing indicated that a tanker carrying nearly 10 million gallons of crude oil narrowly missed running aground near Anacortes last year. (See also Page 14.)

"Our modest proposal," Scott said, "is that each spill, like a hurricane, have a name — the name of a state legislator who votes in favor of bringing big oil tankers into Puget Sound."

Convict Holds 12

HUNTSVILLE, Tex. (UPI) — A desperado wanted for 50 murders in the United States and Mexico held 12 hostages in the state prison today and vowed to kill them if his demands for freedom were not met.

Three other inmates were with him, two of them fellow Mexican-Americans apparently helping in the escape attempt.

Prison officials said they had no intention of meeting the demands, and Warden Hal Husbands early today broke off talks with the leader, Fred Gomez Carrasco, 34.

Carrasco, armed with three .38-calbre revolvers, ordered bedding, food, pillows, water, aspirin and a bottle of liquid antacid sent to his fortress in a classroom of the prison library.

The hostages, eight of them women, were four librarians, six instructors, a prison guard and a Catholic chaplain, the Rev. Joseph O'Brien. The status of the fourth prisoner was unclear, but appeared to be an inmate hostage.

B.C. May Move Welfare Jobless

A plan to relocate welfare recipients to areas of B.C. where jobs are available is being considered by the provincial government, Human Resources Minister Norman Levi said Wednesday.

The policy will be clarified in the fall, said Levi, who was speaking on a taped television show to be broadcast Sunday night on Channel 6.

Today the proposal was given tentative support from two other cabinet ministers and was welcomed by Victoria-area municipal spokesmen and some members of the community.

Levi said his department had been examining the problem of unemployment and welfare for two months and will discuss methods of dealing with it in a meeting with Canada Manpower.

The minister was reacting to the recent action of Surrey and Coquitlam in removing about 90 single, able-bodied persons from the welfare roll, and said his philosophy was that able-bodied persons must work.

In outlining how the proposal might work, Levi said: "I think that we're going to have proscribe certain areas in terms of low employability and say to people: 'If you stay in this area you have a limited amount of possibility to get welfare and then you must move on to an area where there is employment.'"

He added: "This business of moving people from where they prefer to live . . . to areas where there's a shortage of employment — that's one of the things we're going to have to tackle."

A pilot program of setting up such a program in B.C., is being undertaken by a large company, he said. Only families have been considered so far and they would be moved to an area where jobs and housing are waiting for them. He would not elaborate.

The biggest employment problem today is that of single persons in the 16-24 age group, who have few job skills and who might be helped by training and retraining programs, the minister indicated.

But Levi noted the Surrey and Coquitlam action had not worked. He said those areas still lack pickers needed by berry farmers, although that was one employment opportunity cited by the municipalities in support of reducing the welfare roll.

Levi believes Surrey and Coquitlam acted illegally in violation of the federal-provincial agreement on the Canada Assistance Plan. This provides for 50 per cent of welfare costs paid by Ottawa, 40 per cent by the province and 10 per cent by municipalities, and unilateral action by a municipality is not permitted.

B.C. will take no action until the end of summer when the effect of the cutback will be assessed.

But if the municipal action has not been effective, Ottawa can sever its payments and the province can stop pay-

Cod Ruling for U.K.

THE HAGUE (AP) — The International Court of Justice decided by a 10-4 vote today that Iceland cannot unilaterally exclude British fishing vessels from the area between 12 and 60 nautical miles off its coast.

OOPS! THERE WENT 3,700 YEARS . . .

OTTAWA (CP) — It's enough to give an electronic calculator indigestion, but Canada lost more than 37 centuries worth of work in just one month this year because of work stoppages.

That's not quite how the labor department reported statistics for May Wednesday, but it's how the figures work out arithmetically.

The total May loss in man-days — the amount of work one man does in one — was 1,365,870, compared with 619,740 in April and 523,920 in May, 1973.

Divide 1,365,870 by 365, the number of days in a non-leap year, and the answer is 3,742.1 man-years. Divide that by 100, and the answer is 37.42 man-centuries.

Pint and a Chat At Prairie Inn

Central Saanich's historic Prairie Inn may ring again with the clink of beer glasses and the zing of darts.

The Inn will probably house the first neighborhood pub approved for the Greater Victoria area under new provincial legislation.

Central Saanich council subdivision and zoning committee will recommend to council next week that the application by the Inn's owners, Gavin and Bev Harper, be approved.

The Harpers have already started the mandatory canvass of neighbors within a six-block radius of the proposed pub site and so far the reaction has been good.

"A fellow called me this morning to ask why I hadn't gone back to his place because there were three people there who wanted to sign in favor of the pub," Bev Harper said today.

The pub could open up within two months, she said, and will have one room with a bar, tables and standing room, another room with a fireplace and tables which will be the "quiet place" and facilities for musical entertainment and dancing.

Cribbage boards will also be provided for customers, she said.

The Inn was built in 1893, the year the Victoria and Sidney Railway went through the area, and was the first pub on the Saanich Peninsula.

Ottawa Bomb Scare Real

Times News Services

OTTAWA — A bomb device "big enough to do a lot of damage" was safely removed from a city shopping mall here last Wednesday but a search for another bomb three hours later produced nothing.

The device, found inside a shoe box in a tree planter was used to decorate Bank Street mall. It was situated about 10 to 15 feet from RCMP A-Division headquarters and was discovered by an officer reporting for night duty.

Police said an officer protected by a shield opened the shoe box to find a tangle of wires and two squat cylindrical devices which contained black powder.

The threat which fizzled came at 2:35 a.m. and sent police on a fruitless search. Police said they had no clues in either incident.

Cyprus Force Hiked

Times News Services

OTTAWA—External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said today Canada will double its troop strength in Cyprus, as requested by United Nations Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim.

Sharp told reporters that Canada will increase the number of Canadian soldiers from 487 men to 950.

But he said he considered the increase in troops "a temporary measure" and said it would be reviewed when Canada reviews its participation in the Cyprus force on Dec. 15.

He said the Canadian soldiers could be on Cyprus within four days.

Meanwhile, a threatened clash between Turkish and United Nations troops over control of Nicosia airport was averted today with a pledge from Turkey not to use force to try to eject the UN soldiers.

A contingent of 500 British troops in armored cars was reported on its way to the airport from British bases in south Cyprus to bolster the UN force. Britain was flying a squadron of 12 Phantom jets to the island because of what the British defence ministry called the "tense situation."

Canadian troops on Cyprus have been moved back from the airport at Nicosia to their old job of patrolling the Green Line between Greek and Turkish-Cypriot positions.

The 100 Canadians have been replaced by British troops.

Fighting on the troubled island died out today, but Turkish troops still surrounded a tiny UN contingent holding the battered remains of Nicosia airport.

One UN officer said Greek anti-aircraft emplacements were on the perimeter of the airport and Turkish troops surrounded it.

Canadian troops played a major role in the takeover of the airport, which was a mess after the ceasefire quieted most of the fighting between Greeks and Turks.

Turkish Foreign Minister Turan Gunes, however, arrived in Geneva today for Cyprus peace talks with his British and Greek counterparts and said prospects for a settlement are good.

"The conference is starting with a good omen," Gunes said in French when he landed at Geneva Airport. "We have conference partners in the Greek government of Constantine Caramanlis who are well known in Turkey."

It is expected that the ministers will meet for about three days, adopt a communique supporting the ceasefire and create a working group.

India Joining Race

NEW DELHI (UPI) — India will join the space race within the next four years, Prime Minister Indira Gandhi said Wednesday. "The first orbital flight is scheduled to take place in 1978," Mrs. Gandhi said in a written reply to a question from parliament. She gave no further details.

Obscene Mule-Riders Beware at Thetis

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

If, in a mood of gay abandon, you feel the urge to gallop your "horse, mule or ass" on the beach at Thetis Lake Park, the while emitting "offensive noises" or hurling "obscene or insulting" remarks at sunbathers, before cooling off with a quick skinny dip in the lake . . . resist the impulse.

The general prohibition on such whimsical frolics already stands on the city's statute book, in the form of the parks bylaw, but a bylaw scheduled for introduction at today's city council meeting seeks to make the no-no's more specific in their application to Thetis Lake.

City solicitor Jakob de Villiers says as the city can normally legislate only within its geographical boundaries, it had to obtain a special act of the legislature in 1962 to legislate for Thetis Lake Park, and at that time the city's parks bylaw was amended to incorporate such provisions.

But now it is felt that the special topographical and other features of the semi-wilderness park should be recognized with a separate set of rules and regulations from those governing its formal city cousins.

For instance, the draft bylaw for Thetis Lake includes sections dealing with the ticket machine at the park entrance, and the mandatory displaying of 25-cent parking tickets on vehicle dashboards.

There are, too, other interesting differences between the proposed new bylaw and the old catch-all statute.

The Thetis Lake bylaw would ban any dogs in the park unless they are "kept on a leash or carried within the arms" of their owners at all times. (Leash-less owners of St. Bernards and Great Danes be warned — that could be a tiring walk!)

But the general parks bylaw is more sweeping in its proscription of all two-and four-legged creatures: "No person as owner or having the control of any animal or fowl shall suffer or permit such animal or fowl to run at large . . ."

Fowl aren't mentioned in the Thetis Lake rules, so presumably one could saunter along the trails with one's tame duck waddling behind.

Then there's the whole question of public behavior and decency.

Under this general heading the Thetis Lake bylaw would insist, among other provisions, that no one "undress
